Frank Takes Stand--Tells His Story

Divorced Wife Kills Judge and His Bride

JUDGE W. S. GODBEE AND WIFE KILLED IN MILLEN POSTOFFICE

Jealous Divorcee Sends Volley of Bullets Into Bodies of Unsuspecting Victims, Slaying Man Instantly

'AM PERFECTLY SATISFIED,' DECLARES WOMAN IN JAIL

Mrs. Godbee Will Make No Statement—Two Had Been Divorced Several Years Before March Wedding

(By Associated Press.)

MILLEN, Ga., Aug. 18.—Judge W. S. Godbee and his wife were killed in the Millen postoffice this morning by Mrs. Edna Godbee, Judge Godbee's divorced wife.

Judge Godbee, who is county commissioner, and his young wife walked into the postoffice together and found Mrs. Edna Godbee there. The judge spoke to her and, without a word, she whipped out a revolver and fired two bullets into his body and one in his arm, then turned and sent three more into the body of his bride. Judge Godbee died instantly, and his wife died later.

The shooting occurred at a time when many people were in the vicinity of the postoffice as the morning mail had recently arrived.

Judge Godbee and his wife were accustomed to visit the postoffice together about this time of the morning. The divorced wife, knowing this, apparently had planned her visit there just in time to intercept them. It is said she let them get past a step or two before she removed her revolver from her handbag and began to shoot. All of the bullets entered from the back.

Sheriff Johnston was in the telephone office across the street from the postoffice and witnessed the most of the shooting. His attention was attracted by the first shot and the others that followed were seen by him. He was among the first to reach Judge Godbee.

The woman who did the shooting said nothing to the crowd which witnessed it, but walked toward her home. She was stopped by the sheriff, who accompanied her to the residence, where she obtained some clothes, and readily consented to go to the jail, where she will be held pending action of the grand jury.

"I am perfectly satisfied," is the only statement she will make.

Jealousy is said to have been the cause of the shooting. It has been known for some time that the divorced wife was displeased at the second marriage, though she had made no threats and no trouble was feared.

She was divorced from Judge Godbee several years ago, following a two-year separation. A 16-year-old daughter has been living with her since the divorce, while two married sons are also issue of her marriage with Judge Godbee.

Judge Godbee, who was about fifty-five years old, was married to the second wife, aged twenty-eight, last March, going to Pennsylvania for his bride. They had been living in Millen since the marriage, as had Mrs. Edna Godbee, who was Miss Perkins, from Perkins Junction, Ga.

Judge Godbee had been a resident of Millen for twenty-five years. He was well known and considered a wealthy. His bride was unusually beautiful.

POSTMASTER H. L. M'KEE REQUESTED TO RESIGN

Postal Assistant Secretary Requests Atlanta Chief to Quit at Once

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 18.—The resignation of Postmaster Hugh L. McKee is expected this week by the postoffice department, following which the nomination of Bolling Jones will be sent to the senate by the president. A speedy confirmation awaits the nomination of Mr. Jones.

The postoffice department in requesting Mr. McKee's resignation on the strength of a recent inspection of the Atlanta postoffice, suggested that it would be acceptable within a week or ten days. It is believed that Mr. McKee will comply with the request, bow gracefully and step down and out.

The report of the inspectors charges a poor and defective administration of the office under the management of Mr. McKee. It sustains the complaints of numerous patrons as to unsatisfactory service and refers to friction and lack of harmony among the subordinates, rendering demoralization in the service.

THAW WRITES TO HIS MOTHER AS HE FLEES FROM INSANE ASYLUM

Letter Dated From New York City at Noon Sunday Says He Will "Take Rest" Before Coming Home

CANNOT BRING BACK THE FUGITIVE, LAWYERS SAY

Officials Hunt High and Low for Escaped Millionaire—Believed to Have Sailed for Europe

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw received about noon today a letter from her son, Harry K. Thaw, who escaped from Matteawan hospital for the criminal insane Sunday. Thaw planned to "take a rest" before going to the Thaw country place, Elm Hurst, at Cresson, Pa.

The letter was postmarked, "New York, Aug. 17, 12 p. m. station O." Inside on a long slip of paper was Thaw's communication written in pencil. It ran as follows:

"All well. Shall take a rest before going to Elm Hurst as I might be asked for interviews and do not wish to refuse, yet do not care to make any statement. Hope M. & G. (Mr. and Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie) arrive safe, and that you will go home together.

"Have sent a short note to the Journal.

"(Signed) H. K. T."

The fugitive had apparently intended sending the foregoing by telegraph as a night letter, for it was so marked. He changed his mind, however, and gave it to some one to mail for him. Whoever did addressed it in ink, in a scrawl evidently by untutored hands.

Mrs. Thaw explained that the letter was in her son's handwriting and for that reason she knew that it had come from him. She added that she did not know where he was today or just when he would go to Cresson.

"However, I shall leave New York for Elm Hurst tomorrow," she added.

"Then you think your son regards himself safe in Pennsylvania?" she was asked.

"I am not a mind reader," smiled Mrs. Thaw, "but I approve of whatever he thinks best. The escape was a complete surprise to me and while a rather high handed piece of work, I must say that it was exceedingly neat. I am, of course, delighted."

The theory advanced that Thaw boarded a yacht yesterday near South Norwalk, Conn., would not down this afternoon, although no trace of any such craft had been found. Yachts thereabouts were numerous in the afternoon and identification of those passing up and down the sound was a difficult matter.

One in particular was noted. It was a low, white craft about 160 feet long, with a black stack, yellow rimmed. According to a New York yachtsman who was cruising off South Norwalk yesterday, he was attracted by the sight of such a boat but did not get its name. A party of three was on board in a speed boat during the middle of the afternoon, he said, and the yacht headed down the sound toward New London.

George Lauder, Jr., said to be a distant relative of the Thaw family, is at present cruising in the schooner yacht Endymion. The craft was reported to have left Vineyard Haven, Mass., early yesterday. A servant at the Lauder country place said today that Mr. Lauder was cruising, where, she didn't know.

LEO. M. FRANK ON WITNESS STAND

FACING THE JURY, FRANK ASSERTS HIS INNOCENCE OF MARY PHAGAN'S DEATH

All Other Testimony of the Defense Had Been Practically Completed When Court Reconvened Monday Afternoon and the Stage Was Set for the Accused Superintendent to Tell Where He Was and What He Did on Day of Tragedy

MAYFIELD GIRL REPUDIATES TESTIMONY GIVEN ABOUT FRANK LOOKING INTO DRESSING ROOM

Solicitor Dorsey by Questions Suggests That He Will Try to Prove That Frank Went to Hapeville With a Young Girl One Week Before Murder — Many Girls Employed at the Pencil Factory Testify to Frank's Good Character

Leo M. Frank, superintendent of the National Pencil factory, accused of the murder of little Mary Phagan on April 26, mounted the witness stand in his own behalf at 2:06 o'clock Monday afternoon. When court reconvened after the recess for lunch, all other defense testimony had practically been completed, and the stage was set for Frank to face the jury and tell his own story of where he was and what he did on the day of the tragedy. Talking in a firm, clear voice that carred to all parts of the court room, Frank asserted hs nnocence of the crime with which he is charged and denounced the story told by Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, as a tissue of infamous lies.

Frank was rather pale on the stand, and was calm. He sat with his hands clasped and later put them on his knees.

A murmur ran through the audience when Frank sat cooly down in the witness chair.

"Such papers as you want at any time during your statement," said Mr. Arnold, "will be found right here on the table. You can come down and get them."

Judge Roan read the law regarding the testimony of a defendant in a murder case.

"The jury may believe it in preference to sworn testimony," said the judge, "or can disregard it, as they see fit."

Concluding, Judge Roan turned to Frank and read: "The defendant does not have to answer any questions that are put to him unless he so desires."

STORY OF HIS LIFE.

"I was born in Paris, Tex.," began Frank. "Three months later my parents moved to New York and took me with them. That remained my residence until I moved to the south.

"I attended the public schools in Brooklyn and prepared there for college. In the fall of 1902 I entered Cornell university. I took a course in mechanical engineering. I remained there until the fall of 1906, when I graduated. I then accepted a position with the B. F. Sturdivant company, of Hoosic, Mass.

The morning session was taken up by character witnesses who estified to the good character of he defendan and by the introduction by the defense of documentary evidence. Among the documentary evidence admitted s evidence ws the model of the pencil fctory, the cbbge brought into court by Dr. T. H. Hncock, Conley's four affdavts, the fnancal sheets sad to have been made out by Frank and Frank's letter to his uncle when was wrtten on Apri 26.

Miss Emily Mayfield, one of the employes at the pencil factory, and the one mentioned in the testimony by Miss Irene Jackson, took the stand Monday and emphatically denied Miss Jackson's story that Frank came to the girls' dressing rooms at the factory while she was in one of them. She further stated that she never heard of Frank looking in the dressing rooms while other girls were occupying them.

Mrs. J. G. Wardlow, nee Miss Lula McDonnell, a former employe at the factory, denied questions asked her by Solicitor Dorsey as to whether she had heard that Frank and a little girl were on the Hapeville car on the Saturday prior to the murder of Mary Phagan and that Frank tried to persuade the girl to leave the car with him at several points on the trip. When the solicitor announced his intention of asking these questions, Mrs. Rae Frank, mother of the accused, left the court room.

Twenty-four factory girls took the witness chair Monday and told the jury of their belief in their superintendent's good character. One of them, Mrs. Mattie Thompson declared that she knew that the girls frequently flirted through the windows of the dressing rooms at the factory with boys on the outside and had made a complaint to Frank and Darley.

Another witness, Mrs. M. E. Fleming, admitted under the cross examination by the solicitor that she knew Frank worked on the financial sheet on Saturday mornings while she was in his employ as his stenographer from April to December, 1911.

That the defense of Leo M. Frank would close its case Monday was indicated before the court convened Monday morning by statements of attorneys for the accused man.

The rebuttal evidence by the state will begin immediately after Frank concludes his statement to the jury. The defense will have its turn again with rebuttal. And after that, perhaps by Wednesday or Thursday, the lawyers for both sides will begin their arguments.

BRANCH RESUMES TESTIMONY.

The first witness was Harllee Branch, reporter of The Journal, who was recalled to the stand to finish his testimony suspended at adjournment Saturday. He was examined first by Solicitor Dorsey.

"Now, Mr. Branch, you were saying when court adjourned Saturday that you were in the factory from about 12:15 or 12:20 to 1 o'clock. How much of the time did Conley spend in talking while he was acting his story?"

"Just as a pure estimate, I should say he spent about fifteen minutes."

"Didn't you say the other day that he spent about half his time talking?"

"No, I don't think I did."

The witness was examined by Attorney Arnold for the defense.

"What time did you get to the factory, Mr. Branch?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"About 12:10."

"What time did Conley begin?"

"It must have been about 12:15 or 12:18."

"Didn't you say that he went through his enactment very rapidly?"

Solicitor Dorsey objected. The question was changed.

"With what speed did Conley go through the performance?"

"He went through it rapidly, some times on a trot."

"You say he did some talking. Was that while he was acting, or did he stop to do his talking?"

"A few times he stopped to explain and he was talking most all of the time during his performance."

"How much time did you say he lost while he was talking?"

"About 15 minutes."

"What time did you leave the factory?"

"It was 1 o'clock when I called the office, and I left as soon as the man came to relieve me, which was about 5 or 10 minutes later."

"Then you were there about 50 minutes?"

"Yes."

CONLEY WROTES NOTES.

"What was Conley doing when you left the factory?"

"He had just finished writing a note."

"Did he write wour notes?"

"No, I saw him write just one."

"How long was he writing that one?"

"He wrote it right off and it was only a few lines, so I should say it took him about two minutes."

"How long did Conley stay in the wardrobe?"

"He stepped right in and stepped

ATLANTA CLUB SIGNS UP "GOAT" HOLLIDAY

Ex-Tech First-Sacker Gets Try-Out Next Spring and May Succeed Agler

The call of the bat and ball has proved too much for Ware Holliday, better known as "Goat," and this Atlanta boy has agreed to sign up with the Atlanta club for a trial next season. Holliday has held off for some time, but the star work of his old team-mate and captain, Harry Holland, proved too much and he had to enter the game again.

Holliday was raised on baseball around the back lots of Atlanta and for several seasons starred as first baseman of the Tech nine. He only left Tech this season and since then has played in the Empire league, where he made a record as a grand fielder and a timely hitter.

While at Tech Holliday was rated as the most sensational fielding first-sacker in college baseball and as a base-runner he was second to none. He was a regular Joe Agler around the first bag and as Atlanta will be without the services of Agler next season Holliday will stand a mighty good chance of making good. A new first-sacker must be found and Holliday is a mighty good man to have around.

WILSON WILL NOT MIX IN NEW YORK POLITICAL ROW

Consults Precedents in Sulzer-Glynn Case, but Will Keep Hands Off

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 18.—President Wilson will not intervene to quiet the political row in the state of New York unless the situation gets very much more aggravated than it has been to date. He says he proposes to live up to the constitution of the United States in such matters, and the constitution requires the federal government only to guarantee a republican form of government to each of the several states.

It is apparent that the president has been looking up the precedents in the case, however. When some of his callers this morning asked him whether he expected anything to come up which would require him to decide which is the real governor of New York, he said nothing had come up so far. More than that, he did not expect anything to come up unless it might be the question of an extradition case between New York and the District of Columbia. He did not indicate what the nature of his action might be if such a case came before him for decision.

But, he did say there was nothing to call upon the federal government in ordinary circumstances to decide who is governor of New York. He called attention to the fact that early in the last century a case had come up in the state of Rhode Island, when a decision was made that the federal government had no power to step in and decide which was governor of that state.

VETO EXPECTED FOR WAYWARD GIRLS' BILL

Appropriation for Home Is Thought Too Large—Auto Tax Bill Seems Doomed

Although Governor Slaton has not committed himself one way or another, it is rather generally expected around the capitol that he will veto at least two bills passed by the general assembly. One of these is the bill appropriating $20,000 for a wayward girls' home, which was ardently backed by the Georgia Prison Reform association and the Men and Religion Forward Movement, and the other is the bill providing an annual registration fee for automobiles and the distribution of the fund among the counties of the state according to rural route mileage.

Governor Slaton stated Monday morning that neither of the measures had yet reached him, and until he had carefully read their provisions he could not say what he would do with them. Both of these bills were passed on the last day of the session.

Leading members of both house and senate declare that the governor advised them that he would veto the wayward girls' home bill if it carried an appropriation in excess of $10,000. They declare the legislature broke faith with the governor and that they expect him to veto the bill.

A large number of state house officials and several members of the legislature take the position that the automobile registration bill is unconstitutional because it requires the state to collect a tax and then distribute the money among the counties.

CASTRO STRONGHOLD IS CAPTURED BY FEDERALS

Revolution in Venezuela Ended and Colombia Establishes Friendly Relations

(By Associated Press.)

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao, Aug. 18.—Coro, the town in the state of Falcon, where revolutionary followers of Cipriano Castro struck their first blow in an attempt to overthrow President Gomez, has been recaptured by government troops after a fierce battle, according to advices brought here today.

The revolutionary leaders, General Lazaro Gonzales and General Urbina, were killed in the fight.

A small force of government troops is reported to have been defeated at Cinamalca by rebels.

Notwithstanding new uprisings which have broken out at various points in Venezuelan territory it has not been considered necessary to send expedition from the army of President Gomez, now camped at Maracay, to suppress them.

The government of Colombia today notified Venezuela that Emeterio Lizza has been appointed Colombian minister at Caracas in succession of Dr. J. C. Borda, and the hope was expressed that the friendly relations now existing between the two countries would continue.

The appointment of Senor Lizza and the expression of friendliness from Colombia is looked upon as discrediting the reports of serious friction between the two governments over the aid which Augstin Bernl and other Colombians received at Cucuta, a town on the Venezuelan frontier, are said to have given to Castro's followers.

Wife of New York Governor, Who Would Take Blame for Speculations in Campaign Fund

ALBANY.—Mrs. William Sulzer, wife of the governor who has been impeached for using campaign funds for speculation in Wall street, has offered to take all the blame on herself, and has thus brought about a remarkable situation. Friends of hers say that for many years she has handled the governor's funds because he knew little about business affairs. She had power to indorse his checks. She is said to have taken campaign checks for many thousands of dollars and used them in Wall street operations about the time of the election last fall. The governor, her friends say, knew nothing about this until recently.

Tammany opponents of the governor insist that there is no truth in the story, but was given out as the act of a discredited politician, who in a last desperate attempt to hold his office is hiding behind a woman's skirts.

DIGGS TRIAL ENTERS ON ITS THIRD WEEK

Defendant May Take the Stand to Show He Did Not Violate Mann Act

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18.—The third week of the trial of Maury I. Diggs, charged with white slavery under the Mann law, will begin tomorrow. Diggs is expected to take the stand in support of the defense's contention that the purpose which impelled Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti to run away with Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris from Sacramento to Reno was solely to escape trouble threatening them. The defense also will seek to show that the girls were not transported within the meaning of the act.

L. P. Diggs, father of the defendant, already has testified that he had threatened the four with arrest in the hope of severing his son's relations with the Warrington girl, and the owner of the building in which Diggs had an office related that he had warned Diggs that juvenile officers would be after him for taking young girls to his office.

By showing that troubles were accumulating about the young architect, the defense will try to convince the jury that he was afraid to remain in Sacramento and that if he had not gone to Reno he would have fled to some point in California, where he would have not been under the jurisdiction of the Mann law.

GOV. FOSS DECLARES HE'S NOW REPUBLICAN

Not Definite, However, as to Seeking Republican Nomination

(By Associated Press.)

LYNNFIELD, Mass., Aug. 18.—Eugene N. Foss, three times elected governor of Massachusetts as Democratic, and a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the presidency last year, today declared himself again a Republican, but remained indefinite regarding his reported candidacy for the Republican nomination for re-election.

Speaking on the same platform with Congressman A. P. Gardner and Colonel Evert Jansen, avowed candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, Governor Foss addressed the Essex Republican club members "as fellow Republicans," and made a plea for Republican success, because, he said, "the state and nation need the return of the Republican party to power, and Republican party is justly entitled to success, although its leaders in the past have been faithless to the pledges of the party."

Kaiser's Son

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Interest is evinced in many quarters owing to the announcement in the press that the youngest son of the German emperor, Prince Joachim, is to spend a part of this month in England. The prince will travel and be in residence strictly incognito, and it is announced that he will visit London, the Isle of Wight, Edinburgh, and penetrate far into the Scottish highlands. Prince Joachim is in his twenty-third year, having been born on December 17, 1890, and this will be his first visit of duration to England.

Mrs. Martin H. Glynn, Wifeof New Acting Governor of New York

ALBANY.—Mrs. Martin H. Glynn, one of the most beautiful women of Albany, where some of the old Knickerbocker families furnish beauty, has been injected into the remarkable squabble about the governorship of New York state. Her husband, publisher of the Times-Union of that city and lieutenant governor, is now trying to gain possession of the office of governor which Sulzer lost by impeachment. Mrs. Glynn will become the leader of Albany society if her husband succeeds. But what position she will occupy ultimately is puzzling the women of the capital.

Electric Runabout Wouldn't Stop Until Its Battery Died Out

(By Associated Press.)

HUNTINGTON, Ind., Aug. 18.—When Mrs. J. W. Caswell and daughter, Miss Mary, driving in their electric runabout yesterday got ready to stop, the machine persisted in continuing on the go. So they went along with the car, trying various means to bring it to a standstill.

They grew tired of the enforced ride and headed the electric up a steep hill. Miss Caswell applied the brakes and reduced the speed so that her mother could jump out. She telephoned her husband to head off the machine and when the girl drove up the hill again, he hopped in and the girl jumped out. He drove up one street and down another. Dining time came and passed and still the car rolled merily on.

After about four hours the battery was exhausted and adding insult to injury the car "died" on the outskirts of the town making Mr. Caswell walk several blocks to his home.

"SPY" IN LOBBY PROBE UNDER LAWYERS' GUNS

Accused Representative's Attorneys Will Strive to Shake Page's Story

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Representative James T. McDermott's lawyers turned a grilling cross-examination today upon I. H. McMichael, former chief page of the house, planning to shake his story that McDermott got $7,500 from Washington pawnbrokers trying to beat the federal loan shark bill.

McMichael, referred to in the lobby exposure of Martin M. Mulhall as "chief spy" upon congressmen for the National Association of Manufacturers, testified he had not seen any money given to McDermott and had only McDermott's own word about the alleged transaction with the loan sharks.

McMichael swore that in an effort to have him "keep his mouth shut," McDermott's brother-in-law had promised him a municipal job here. McMichael said he was to get the job through Attorney Ralston, counsel for the American Federation of Labor and a former partner of District Commissioner Siddons. Ralston denied that he or the federation was concerned in the alleged offer.

Little Woman Packs Husband's Body Over 24-Hour Trail Alone

(By Associated Press.)

GRIZZLY GULCH, Cal., Aug. 18.—A tired little woman leading a burro with a lopsided pack came down the mountain into this camp today and in a few minutes was transfigured into a pitiful heroine. Every man in the street helped to undo the hitches which fastened a plank coffin to the pack saddle and carry it into a house where the little woman cried her heart out over the body of her husband.

Her name, she presently told her new friends, was Mary Stribling. Her husband, P. T. Stribling, a prospector, was killed, and his partner was badly hurt last Friday in a cave-in on their claim. She made the injured man as comfortable as she could, placed provisions where he could reach them and then built the coffin around her husband's body and succeeded in getting it on the burro's back. She walked twenty-four hours with scarcely a halt to reach Grizzly Gulch.

ANNAPOLIS EXAMS TO BE PROBED BY EDUCATORS

2,000 Educators Will Be Jury to Decide Logic of Entrance Exams

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Whether the entrance examinations to the naval academy are so rigid as to be prohibitive, is a question the navy department is to leave to the decision of a jury of two thousand grave and dignified educators. It became known today that the department, stung by repeated charges that the examinations were unfair and illogical, had determined to submit the matter to two thousand high school principals and college professors in every part of the United States.

Rear Admiral Victor Blue already has ordered printed 2,500 copies of the last examination paper and these soon will be sent broadcast.

Accompanying each copy will be a series of queries, which when answered by the educators, are calculated to settle for good the controversy over the "stiffness" of the examinations. Here are the leading questions the educators are asked to answer:

"Is the examination too difficult for the ordinary high school student in his third year?

"Pick out the questions which seem improper in an examination for entrance to the naval academy.

"How long should each examination require?"

Charges have been made in congress that the examination is so difficult that it bars from the service the average youth. Figures have been prouced to show that fewer than one-half of the aspirants pas the quisz successfuly.

STRANGE WORM INFESTS CAROLINA COTTON BOLLS

Worm Is Similar to Boll Weevil and Is Creating Havoc in Certain Sections

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

GREENVILLE, S. C., Aug. 18.—From Dunklin township in this county come alarming reports of the invasion in that section of a small worm which is said to be playing havoc by devouring cotton bolls. Large fields of cotton, it is said, are infested with the worm, and the farmers are greatly exercised over it. They are unable to account for the presence of the worms, and they say they are first of the kind ever seen in this section. The worms are rapidly spreading over the lower section of the county, and it is feared that unless something is quickly done to stop the ravages of the pest the crop in that section will be seriously damaged.

The worms subsist on the cotton lint it seems, boring their way into the boll, in much the same manner as the boll weevil. After the insect enters the boll the fruitage turns black and later rots. After the boll is pulled apart, a small insect will fly out, having been transformed from the original worm. The matter has been reported to the agricultural department, and it is expected that an expert will be sent here to make an examination.

Same Thing

(National Monthly.)

In the early days of Arizona, an elderly and pompous chief justice was presiding at the trial of a murder case. An aged negro had been the murdered man's only eye witness to the murder was a very small negro boy, when he was called to give his testimony, the lawyer for the defense objected on the ground that he was too young to know the nature of an oath, and in examining him asked:

"What would happen to you if you told a lie?"

"He debbil 'ud git me!" the boy replied.

"Yes, and I'd get you," sternly said the chief justice.

"Dat's jus' what I said!" answered the boy.

"Mary's Lamb" Opens The Atlanta Theater Sept. 3

Homer C. George Announces Bookings for 1913-14 Season—Attractive Musical Extravaganza Picked to Open Playhouse

Formal announcement has been made by Homer C. George, manager of the Atlanta theater, that the popular play house will open for the season of 1913-14 on the evening of September 3, with an attractive musical extravaganza, new to the south, bearing the title "Mary's Lamb." From then until next May the Atlanta will seldom be dark.

Mr. George returned to Atlanta from New York Sunday bringing with him the Frohman and Klaw and Erlanger theatrical contracts for the coming season. More and better shows are listed this year than have ever before appeared in the south and several others are to be added.

Numerous offerings from the Shuberts and their connections will feature the season. Many of the attractions booked are new, not only to this city, but to the south in general, and stars aleady familiar to the theater-going public will make new appearances while others will make their debut in Atlanta.

The early September productions will be "Little Miss Fix-It," "The Merry Countess," and the local favorite Otis Harlan, is scheduled to appear as the star in the Henry W. Savage show, "Little Boy Blue," a highly successful musical comedy. Another early comer is Miss Annie Russell, who plays a three night stand. The Field minstrels will of course come early, and be followed a month later by the Primrose and Dockstader reunion show. George, "Honey Boy," Evans, is due in the spring and Neil O'Brien follows him.

FREE SUGAR SCHEDULE IS OPPOSED BY BRISTOW

Senator Opens Debate on Question by Proposing Graduated Scale on Present Tariff

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Senator Bristow opened debate on the free sugar schedule today by proposing a reduction from $1.90 per 100 pounds, the existing duty, to $1.52 1-2, with additional reductions in period of three and six years, which finally would bring the rate down to $1.27 1-2 and would leave the Cuban 20 per cent differential.

"I do not think it wise at this time," said Senator Bristow, "to disturb the reciprocal relations we have with Cuba. I believe these reductions can be made with absolute safety to our sugar industry and that it would continue to grow and prosper. If the proposed ruinous legislation could be defeated, in my humble judgment, within less than twenty years from this hour we would be producing within our borders every pound of sugar which the American people consumed."

Senator Bristow said he could not find language strong enough to denounce the manner in which the tariff was considered and passed upon in party caucus.

President Wilson has no intention of compromising with insurgent Democrats on the administration currency bill. He made it plain today that he intended to stick by the report of the Democratic majority of the house banking committee and was confident that the house would adopt the Glass bill without material change.

Beside them, dying, was the husband and father, Henry Lake, a restaurant chef. Apparently he had killed all five, then fatally wounded himself.

FORCES OPPOSED TO CLAYTON WAVERING

Senator Robinson Says Governor, Has Power to Appoint Johnston's Successor

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—The first actual break in the Democratic opposition to seating Henry D. Clayton, Governor O'Neal's appointee to the senate, succeeding the late Senator Johnston, of Alabama, was made today by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, who issued a public statement calling the position that the governor had the power to appoint under the new seventeenth amendment. Clayton was waiting to present his credentials and force a test.

DEAD BROOKLYNITE A MAN OF MANY ALIASES

Undertaker Holds Body of Suicide Crazed to Death's Point by Slocum Disaster

The man who committed suicide by taking carbolic acid last Tuesday night at the corner of Whitehall and Hunter streets and on whose body a note was found saying his name was A. S. Brown, is identified by John Green, of 167 Pierpont avenue, as a man who boarded with him. Mr. Green says the dead man's name is J. W. McMullen, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and he is worth probably $150,000.

Letters taken from among the dead man's baggage substantiate this identification. Also, two Brooklyn realty firms have identified him from descriptions.

However, telegrams sent Sunday to addresses of persons said to be McMullen's relatives and the chief of police of Brooklyn have not been answered. Meantime the body is being held at A. J. Bloomfield's undertaking establishment until he is positively identified. Every effort is being made by the undertaker and police to locate the man's relatives.

A screen of mystery arising from an indiscriminate use of aliases by the dead man renders it hard to trace his actions during the past few months, and utterly impossible to make the identification positive. In the note he left A. stated he was taking his own life because he feared a return of insanity.

McMullen disappeared from Brooklyn on October 1, 1912, and a short time later the man who committed suicide here appeared in Tallulah Falls. He secured work there under the name of W. I. Miller with S. F. Condon, a contractor. He then went from Tallulah Falls to Cornelia and there deposited a sum of money in a bank, using the name of W. F. McMullin.

He appeared in Atlanta five weeks ago and went to work at the Kimball hotel as assistant engineer, using the name of A. S. Brown. He worked there about ten days before his death. At different places in Atlanta he is said to have used these aliases, J. W. Miller, A. W. Mullens, R. W. White and A. S. Brown.

Mr. McMullen was a prosperous and successful business man of Brooklyn until the "General Slocum" excursion boat disaster. His second wife and five children were among the victims. A few weeks later he became violently insane and was put in confinement. He got better, but about a year later again became insane. When he disappeared he had been acting queerly for several months.

Mr. McMullen has a brother living at Miami, Fla., treasurer of the county of the same name. He also has two daughters living in Brooklyn, both are with their mother, his first wife.

EXPECTS TO CLEAR OVER $90,000 FROM SINGLE CROP OF PEAS THAT COVERS FOUR ACRES OF CITY LAND

T. A. JACKSON,
And some of his wonderful pea vines, at his home on Capitol avenue.

T. A. Jackson, of 435 Capitol avenue, the Atlanta "Burbank," has a new pea that he and many of his acquaintances believe will prove a boon to the farmer and the country in more ways than one.

In productiveness, it is claimed, this pea excels all others two or three to one; as a food it can be used in many ways; and as provender for stock its economy in production will enable stock raising again to become one of the resources of Georgia farmers.

Mr. Jackson has named his pea the Shahon pea, in honor of a Mr. Shahon, who discovered the pea in its native state in South America and sent it to Mr. Jackson. Mr. Jackson will not tell from what portion of that country it came, and says there is little prospect of anyone ever finding out.

VINES VERY PRODUCTIVE.

To show the extreme productiveness of the pea Mr. Shahon sent three pods in 1912, each containing twenty-two peas. Mr. Jackson planted these in a plot of ground ten feet square and raised from it ten pounds of peas. This spring he planted the ten pounds on four acres of land and expects a return yield of 15,000 pounds of peas.

This pea is far different from the ordinary whip-poorwill or black-eye pea or from any of the 220 varieties of peas now in cultivation. Its pods measure from twenty-four inches to forty-two inches in length, and its vine is far more prolific. The vines, to get best results, are trained to poles about five feet high. One vine will cover this pole with foliage, which is very much like that of any other pea, and will bear approximately 175 pea pods. The pods grow in bunches of two to six and in appearance resemble those on a catawba tree.

The Shahon pea when ripe is a light pinkish brown in color.

EXPECTS BIG PROFITS.

Mr. Jackson expects great returns from his four acres of peas this year. He calculates on selling the peas at $5 a pound for seed or on getting twenty to twenty-four tons of hay from each acre. He expects the yield to be seventy-five bushels to the acre, and as there are four acres this means he expects 300 bushels of peas. A bushel weighs about sixty pounds, making 18,000 pounds he expects to harvest, and at $5 a pound this means $90,000. The hay ought to bring $20 a ton, according to Mr. Jackson's calculations, $90,720. A pretty fair return, even though prospective, from four acres of land.

If the peas are gathered the hay will not be available. Either as hay or peas the crop is almost beyond belief.

As 18,000 pounds of this pea will nearly stock all the pea raisers in Georgia, it can be seen that Mr. Jackson will enjoy profit from his production and enterprise.

Mr. Jackson was the originator of several plants that were successful, among them are the limbless cotton and the dwarf bunch butter bean, called the "Wonder Bean."

He is now endeavoring to get the cooperation of the state commission of agriculture in exploiting his pea to the farmers of Georgia. J. D. Price, commissioner, says of the pea: "it will enable the people of Georgia to take up cattle raising again with sure profit."

THREE NEGROES KILLED IN SUNDAY CRIME WAVE

Craps and Blind Tigers Cause Record Number of Arrests for Sabbath

Craps and blind tigers levied among the negro population of Atlanta Sunday a tribute of three men murdered, one seriously wounded and more than twenty arrested, participating in various cutting scrapes.

A record for crime is thought to have been established for Sunday. In all, 88 arrests were made, which officers state is the largest number made on Sunday in the history of Atlanta.

The first of the three killings occurred at 11:30 o'clock Sunday morning at 282 Butler street. Munch Harris was stabbed and killed by Poney Johnson, a negro desperado. The negro had not been captured shortly before noon Monday. The police do not know the cause of the killing.

B. C. Smith stabbed and instantly killed John Henry Wilkerson, at 80 Decatur street, at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Smith refused to surrender and was captured after a hard chase by Officers Davis and Felder.

Peter Jackson was shot and killed by Ed Smith, alias Ed Campbell, at 72 James street about 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Smith was arrested and Call Officer Palmer shot him through the hand. The trouble is said to have started over a card game.

Several alleged blind tigers were raided where free-for-all cutting rows were in progress. More than twenty negroes were arrested in these places, and a quantity of beer and whisky seized.

INSURANCE AGENCY IS FORMED BY T. B. FRENCH AND CLIFFORD L. LOCHRIDGE

CLIFFORD L. LOCHRIDGE. T. B. FRENCH.

The announcement of the organization of the new insurance agency, composed of T. B. French and Clifford L. Lochridge will be learned with much pleasure. The new firm will have offices at 1610 Candler building and will write all forms of insurance.

Both Mr. Lochridge and Mr. French number their friends by hundreds. They have both been prominently identified for many years with the advertising departments of Atlanta newspapers and have also had commercial experience that will well fit them for their new works.

The French & Lochridge agency will represent, among other concerns, the Nord Deutsche Fire of Hamburg, Germany; the United Fidelity and Guaranty company, of Baltimore, Md., and the Aetna Accident and Liability company of Hartford, Conn. These companies are among the foremost in their respective lines.

Associated with the agency will be John R. Rauschenberg, formery special agent for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company.

HAS LONG SERVICE.

Mr. French leaves the local advertising department of the Constitution after many years of service, to enter the insurance field. He is a man of the finest type and numbers his friends by the thousands. The soul of honor and possessing extraordinary ability in business, he is particularly adapted to insurance work, where, in addition to representing some of the strongest companies doing business in the state, his splendid personality will count for so much in contributing to his success.

For the past eighteen years Mr. French has been associated with the Constitution in the business office and during that time he has made hundreds of friends and admirers in Atlanta. Since 1909 he has held the responsible position of advertising manager and is held in highest esteem by all associated with him.

Mr. Lochridge gave up his connection with the Constitution after his fall through the Masonic temple from which it was feared for a long time he would lose his life. His recovery, however, was as marvelous as it has been complete. No more popular young man lives in Atlanta. Mr. Lochridge has been with the Constitution thirteen years, and at the time of his accident was assistant advertising manager.

Mr. Rauschenberg has had wide experience in fire and casualty insurance. He was formerly special agent for the United States Fidelity and Casualty company and had the distinction of being the youngest special agent traveling in the south.

He was also associated with the Edgar Dunlap insurance agency and for five years held a responsible position with the Firemen's Fund, southeastern headquarters in Macon.

AUTO SHOW COMMITTEE PREPARING FOR EVENT

Most Elaborate Plans in History Planned for Display of 1914 Cars

By next, Wednesday a special committee from the Atlanta Automobile and Accessories association will make a definite announcement of plans for the 1913 automobile show to be held at the auditorium-armory. This committee, which was appointed last week, has been busily at work making formal arrangements for the big event and every auto dealer in the city is preparing to make a fine showing. Many of them have already communicated with their factories with a view to having their 1914 models here for exhibition.

From present indications, the show bids fair to outstrip that of last year, which was a revelation. The association has been assured of full line exhibits from many dealers who had no representation last year.

Among the new exhibits will be the Paige-Detroit cars, the Selden lines, the Cartercar and the Firestone-Columbus. These have already been assured and many more are expected within a few days.

Friends Thought Him Dead Till He Walked Down Peachtree Street

A similarity in names has caused J. B. Mathis, of 129 South Pryor street, a traveling shoe salesman, some queer experiences during the past few days. A man with the same name and initials died Friday and his funeral notice appeared. Since then Mr. Mathis has been greeted with a look of surprise by his acquaintances, and many say, "Why, I thought you were dead."

WINECOFF HOTEL TO OPEN ON OCTOBER 1

The first consignment of furniture that is to decorate the new Winecoff hotel at Peachtree and Ellis streets has arrived and within a month while will be installed in the different rooms.

While the work on the structure is rapidly nearing completion and it appears possible that the hotel may be ready for the public during the latter part of September, Frank Harrell, the lessee has announced that there will be no attempt at a formal opening until October 1, when the doors will be thrown open.

Mr. Harrell does not want to have the opening postponed and for that reason has set the date at a time when there will be no doubt of the entire structure being completely finished both inside and out.

HURTS HEAD DIVING AT LAKEWOOD SUNDAY

R. H. Smith, of 115 Luckie street, who dove off the boat-house steps at Lakewood into the shallow water below, is resting easy at the Georgia Baptist hospital. He suffered a slight concussion of the brain.

The accident happened about 7:30 o'clock Sunday morning. He was then taken to the hospital and given immediate attention by Dr. Dan Sage.

A similar accident happened in the same vicinity at the same place a year ago when a young man broke his neck by diving into shallow water. Skilled surgical treatment saved his life.

BIJOU THEATER TO HAVE MELODRAMA THIS SEASON

Jewell Kelley Stock Company Presents "Her Fatal Shadow" Next Week

The Bijou will reopen on Monday, the 25th, after a period of two weeks' closing, during which the cosy little theater will undergo extensive repairs and a general overhauling. During the past three years the Bijou has never closed its doors, offering a patronage remarkable for vaudeville attractions that has made this house one of the most popular and profitable theaters in the city. For the past ten weeks musical comedy was given and this change proved a decided success and will show up the full strength of the company.

Of the company itself, much interest attaches to every member of the cast and as several of the players are big favorites with local theatre-goers the management feels that the success of the stock company is assured.

The company includes Jewell Kelley, Eddie Black, Rose Morris, Marie Claire, J. N. Owens and several other well known players.

A clever scenic artist will reach the city tomorrow and will be busily engaged painting all the scenery for the opening production.

The engagement of the Jewell Kelley company will begin with a matinee Monday afternoon, August 25. At the Monday night performance ladies will be admitted free, provided each lady is accompanied by an escort holding a paid 20-cent ticket. The sale of seats will begin Thursday morning, the 21st, and the free ticket proposition will hold good only till Monday afternoon at 6 o'clock.

During the engagement of the Jewell Kelley company matinees will be given daily at 2:30 and the night performances at 8:30.

EUGENE WYATT PLEASES MANY AT ORGAN RECITAL

Squalls of Babes Vie With Music Notes, but Organist Delights Audience

As Eugene Wyatt, the English organist, rendered his concert at the auditorium-armory Sunday afternoon, the voices of babies in the large audience vied with the music swelling from the great organ, but no one seemed to mind the opposition, not even the artist.

Mr. Wyatt is the first of a number of noted organists to be presented by the Atlanta Music Festival association prior to the selection of an official city organist to fill the vacancy created in the resignation of Dr. Percy J. Starnes. His program was well varied and the music greatly enjoyed by those present.

GREEN FINED FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

C. W. Green was fined $50.75 in the recorder's court Monday morning on a charge of driving an automobile recklessly. The testimony showed that Mr. Green was violating traffic laws when he collided with Herman Lichenstein at Five Points Saturday.

SUNDAY NIGHT BURGLARS LOOT STORE AND HOME

Ansley Park Residence Robbed of Jewels—Store Entered Through Skylight

Burglars entering the Ansley Park home of S. W. Russell, of the firm of J. J. Russell & Son, some time Sunday night, succeeded in taking away jewelry said to be valued at nearly $600.

How an entrance was made is not known, as the robbery was not discovered until the members of the household were preparing to retire shortly after 11 o'clock and found the upstairs rooms of the residence in disorder.

Skylight burglars entered the store of Morris Brothers at 137 Decatur street Sunday night. Police officers think the burglars gained the roof of the store by stepping off the Washington street viaduct onto an adjoining building in the same block as Morris Brothers and by crossing six or seven roofs to the skylight.

A rope found when the store opened Monday morning dangling from the skylight told the tale. Quite a number of articles of women's wearing apparel were taken and the store thrown into disorder.

DR. HUGH K. WALKER RETURNS TO HIS FLOCK

Dr. Hugh K. Walker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, has returned from a vacation spent in California and was given a hearty greeting by his congregation at the Sunday morning service.

After the service he said he was ready now to take up plans for the new church, which will be built at Peachtree and Sixteenth streets. Dr. Walker refused to accept two offers of pastorates in order that he might stay here until the new church is erected.

"The Transforming Touch of the Master Magician" was the subject of his sermon. On next Wednesday afternoon the church will give a reception to the pastor to which everyone is invited.

REGULAR MEETING OF COUNCIL ON MONDAY

C. L. Ashley Has Plan for Laying Sewer Under City Supervision

Council meets Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, but for the most part only routine matters will be taken up.

C. L. Ashley has prepared an ordinance requiring real estate developers to lay their sewage and water pipes under the supervision of the city department of construction, and it will be introduced.

The object of the ordinance is to protect purchasers of property in subdivisions and to guard against inconveniences and lack of sanitation when the developed property is taken into the city.

"Developers," says Mr. Ashley, "now subdivide their property, cut streets and lay water and sewage without regard to the possibilities of the community. Later such properties are turned over to the city, while the developers retain the ownership of water and sewage pipes. Whenever the city wants to connect up with these, it has to pay for the privileges, and when anything goes wrong with the sewage there is dangerous delay until the property owners remedy the situation.

"If developers are required to lay pipes of such dimensions as will meet the needs of the section, and if they are required to relinquish ownership of pipes when the city takes over the subdivision it will greatly improve matters."

DR. LANDRUM PREACHED TO LARGE CONGREGATIONS

Large congregations filled the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church at the morning and evening services Sunday and heard Dr. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, former pastor of the First Baptist church of Atlanta. Both of the eminent divine's sermons were greatly enjoyed and he was extended a cordial welcome by all on his visit.

COLLEGE DAY PROGRAM BY WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS

A college day program will feature the open meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association, which will be called to order at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in Carnegie hall.

A number of college men, fresh from the varsity campus, will give their reasons for the enfranchisement of women. George Baker Mayer, of Cleveland, Ohio, a student in the architectural college at the University of Pennsylvania, will speak of Men's Equal Suffrage Leagues. With many of his college classmates he has taken part in the "soap box" suffrage campaigns of the north, and will relate the history of his work. There will be a discussion of the suffrage street corner meetings in the north.

Charles McDaniels, son of Rev. Chas. McDaniels, a student at the University of Georgia, will deliver a suffrage address, and Victor Victor, a member of the senior class in the University of Georgia law school, will talk on how the suffrage question appeals to college men.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS SHOW GAIN IN ATTENDANCE

Record Shows Gain of 500 Pupils Over Last Year's Attendance

The Sunday schools of Atlanta are continuing to show a steady gain in attendance over last year. Although now is the time that hot weather and vacations cut down the attendance most, Sunday's attendance at fifteen schools was 4,780 in comparision to 4,244 for the same Sunday last year, an increase of 536, or an average gain of 36 for each Sunday school.

Although Sunday's attendance is not as large as that of several other Sundays this summer that is accounted for by the fact that this is the season of vacations and that many are deterred from attending by hot weather. However, the figures of each Sunday show a steady increase over last year, and is an indication that the internal growth of the schools is satisfactory.

Following is the detailed report of the fifteen schools:

Baby Hurt by Pin Scratch

While holding Mary Lola Morris, the eighteen-months-old daughter of Secretary Morris, of Chief Beavers' office, a neighbor Sunday injured the child painfully when a pin on her dress penetrated the child's arm and tore it severely. Monday Lola is doing well and will suffer no permanent injury from the accident.

LEO FRANK READY TO TELL HIS STORY

fight out."

"Then, in your opinion he didn't stay in the wardrobe over a minute?"

"Yes, about that."

"According to your estimate of the time it took him to write one note, it would have taken him six minutes to write three notes, and according to his estimate he stayed in the wardrobe eight minutes, which would make fourteen minutes, and that added to the fifty minutes you say he consumed in going through the performance would make a total of sixty-four minutes. Now, subtracting the fifteen minutes which, according to your estimate he lost in talking, he would have about forty-nine minutes that it took him to go through the performance, and you say he went through it on the run. Is that right?"

"No, I didn't say he went through it on the run. I say he went through it rapidly."

SAW CONLEY WITH PAPER.

Before being excused the witness was asked more questions by Solicitor Dorsey, who undertook to make him admit that he had changed since Saturday his estimate of the time he went to the factory. In this effort the solicitor was unsuccessful.

Attorney Arnold asked the witness this question:

"Was this negro Conley taken to the press room after he left the stand here in court?"

"Yes."

"Did he read a paper?"

"I saw him pick up a paper."

The witness was excused.

Lou Castro, formerly a baseball player, who stated that he "amuses the public in the summer time and buries it in the winter, being a make-up undertaker, was called to the stand.

Harllee Branch was called for one question by Solicitor Dorsey:

"Conley was looking at the pictures in the paper, and wasn't reading it was he?"

"When I saw him, he was holding the paper and looked like he was reading it. At first he was looking at the pictures, then he seemed to be reading it."

LOU CASTRO TESTIFIES.

Castro said he lives at 79 West Harris street. At the request of Attorney Arnold, he said, he had walked from the corner of Marietta and Forsyth streets to the office of the National Pencil factory. He walked at his average gait, he said, and made the distance in four minutes and 30 seconds. He walked from the facory office to the corner of Alabama and Whitehall streets, he said. That took him three minutes and 20 seconds. He walked from the corner of Hunter and Broad streets to the office of the factory in one and a half minutes, he said.

Miss M. E. Fleming, who stated that she was employed from July 1 to April, 1911, as stenographer for Frank, was the next witness. She testified that his general character was good.

Under cross-examination, she admitted that she judged his character from personal relations, but said she had never heard any charges against him. She also said in answer to questions by the solicitor that while she was in the factory she heard no complaints about girls flirting from the windows, and did not write out any notices prohibiting it. Usually, she said, she left the factory at 1 o'clock on Saturdays.

The solicitor asked what work Frank usually did on Saturday mornings. The witness answered,enumerating a number of things, among them work on the financial sheet.

WORKED SATURDAY MORNINGS.

"You are certain," asked the solicitor quietly, "that he worked on the financial sheet in the mornings?"

"Yes."

"You are positive?"

"Yes."

"Come down," said the solicitor.

Attorney Arnold detained the witness. "You didn't mean to put the financial sheet among those things you enumerated, did you?"

"I didn't say the financial sheet," said the witness.

"Come down," said Mr. Arnold. But the solicitor detained her.

"You know now that you did not say that Frank worked on the financial sheet in the mornings of Saturdays?"

"I don't think I did," said the witness.

At the request of the solicitor, the court stenographer read the questions and answers.

"I think I saw him do a little work on the financial sheet," admitted the witness.

"Well, why were you so positive, and why did you answer to one question that you were certain, and when I asked again said that you were positive?"

"Well, I've seen him do a little work on it," said the witness.

"Come down," said the solicitor.

Before the trial had commenced Monday morning Miss Fleming had received permission of the deputies and had entered court and greeted the defendant.

Geoffrey Winecoff was the next witness on the stand. He is superintendent of the lead plant at the National Pencil factory.

He testified that he was accustomed to visit the factory every alternate Saturday afternoon between July, 1912, and May, 1913. The time of his visits was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, he said. He said that Frank, the office boy, and Schiff, were there nearly always although sometimes the office boy might have been absent. He never saw any women in the office, said he. He frequently saw Holloway, the day watchman, about the factory. He was excused without being cross-examined.

MRS. THOMPSON CALLED.

Mrs. Hattie Thompson, who works on the fourth floor of the pencil factory, was called. In answer to a question as to whether Frank's character is good or bad, she said: "I never heard a word against him in my life."

She was used by the defense to prove that complaint had been made to Darley or Frank that the girls were flirting through the dressing room windows. She testified that about a year ago or less she complained of it to the forelady of her department, who in turn told Darley.

"Isn't it a fact that girls should be at work after 7 o'clock in the morning, and not in the dressing room?" asked Attorney Arnold.

"Yes, sir."

Solicitor Dorsey questioned the witness.

"Who was talking to you about what you are going to testify here?" he asked.

"I don't know." She said that she couldn't remember names. Solicitor Dorsey admonished her to think. After a moment, she said Mr. Haas had talked to her Monday morning. "He asked me if I knew about the girl flirting there?"

"Do you mean to intimate that there are fast girls there?" asked the solicitor.

LIKE ANY "PIFFLY" GIRLS.

"Oh, no, they were just like any other little 'piffy' girls. They wanted to wave at every boy in sight."

"Did they flirt with men inside the factory too?"

"Not that I ever saw."

Answering other questions by the solicitor she said she had talked it over with Mrs. Carson at the factory, and they had decided to report their complaint. She could not name any of the girls who she said flirted, declaring that she had forgotten them. She could not tell who first told her about the flirting. She said she never saw any, but had heard told about it.

The solicitor brought out the fact that girls who worked there on piece work or by the hour frequently changed machines at all hours of the day in the dressing room.

"Did you ever hear of Frank taking a girl into a dark place and putting his arm around her?"

"Never in my life!"

The witness was excused.

CHARACTER WITNESSES.

The following employes of the pencil factory testified to Frank's good character: Miss Annie Howard, Miss Lillie Mae Goodman, Miss Cora Cowan, Miss B. D. Smith, Miss Irene Carson, Miss Lizzie Wood, Miss Ida Holmes, Miss Willie Hatchett, Miss Mary Hatchett and Mrs. O. Johns.

Miss Jennie Mayfield was called as a character witness, but failed to qualify.

The following other character witnesses testified for Frank. All are employes of the Pencil factory. Mrs. Georgia Dertham, Miss Bessie White, Mrs. Zellie Spivey, Miss Minnie Smith, Miss Grace Atherton, Mrs. Margaret McCord.

Mrs. Lizzie Barnes, who worked at the factory only a short time; Miss Ethel Barber, and Miss Velvey Holland declared that they did not know Frank's character well enough to testify.

Several of the preceding were cross questioned, but nothing additional was brought out.

SHIPPING CLERK TESTIFIES.

R. F. Butler, a shipping clerk at the factory, was the next witness. He declared that the doors leading into the metal room are six feet wide. He said there are two glasses in these doors, measuring 15 by 18 inches. He testified that he has known Frank's general character for several years and that it is good.

Solicitor Dorsey cross examined the witness. Butler declared that he measured the doors of the metal room Monday morning. The solicitor asked if the passageway leading back to the metal room is not very narrow. The witness answered that it is not, being possibly 10 feet wide, except for a distance of about 14 feet where there are racks, and in that distance it is only 6 feet wide. Asked if the passage way is very dark, the witness said no, he would not consider it dark.

MAULSBY NOT A WITNESS.

Solicitor Dorsey discovered Harry Maulsby in the room, and stated that he understood Maulsby was to testify. He asked that Maulsby be excluded. Attorney Rosser retorted that he was not going to call Maulsby and that the solicitor need not be wrought up about it.

Deputy Sheriff Minor addressed the spectators, admonishing any other witnesses among them to get out; that they were in contempt of court if they sought to remain. There was no other in the room, however.

The solicitor continued his cross-examination of the shipping clerk.

"When the doors of the metal room are closed, you can see a person through them if he is standing up, can't you?"

"If he's just the least bit at one side of the glass, you can't see him then, can you?"

"I wouldn't say the least bit, but one can get out of the line of vision."

Solicitor Dorsey brought out the fact that the witness has been re-employed by the pencil factory in May and had remained there since.

Rabbi David Marx was recalled to the stand by Attorney Arnold. Before questioning the rabbi, Mr. Arnold consulted with Solicitor Dorsey and said that he wanted him to tell the jury the functions and aims of the B'Nai B'rith. He said that if Mr. Dorsey had any objection he would ask that the jury be sent out of the room while the question was argued.

Solicitor Dorsey told the defense attorneys not to send the jury out, that if there was argument upon the question it could be spoken before them.

Attorney Arnold then put the question to the rabbi asking him to explain the activities and purposes of B'nai B'rith.

Solicitor Dorsey interposed an objection before the rabbi could answer. Addressing the court, the solicitor said, "Your honor, we haven't attacked the B'nai B'rith, and anything pertaining to it is entirely irrelevant. It is already in the records as a charitable organization."

Attorney Arnold argued for admission of the evidence. "My friend Dorsey in cross-examining certain witnesses went into the question of the B'nai B'rith. It only came out in a general way."

Judge Roan ruled that the evidence was not admissible.

Attorney Arnold addressed the court. "I want to state, but not in the presence of the jury, what we seek to prove." Solicitor Dorsey said, "Step over and dictate it to the stenographer. I've got no objection to that."

Attorney Rosser in an undertone that could not be heard by anybody but the stenagrapher, dictated for two or three minutes to the stenographer. Rabbi Marx left the stand, and Mrs. S. A. Wilson, an employe of the pencil factory for four years, was called.

MORE CHARACTER EVIDENCE.

Mrs. Wilson testified that Frank's character is good as far as she knows. In answer to a question by Attorney Hooper, on cross examination, she said that she never had heard anything against Frank.

Miss Lena McMurtry, a telephone operator who worked in the pencil factory six or seven weeks, about the time of the murder, was called, and asked as to whether or not she knew the character of Frank. She replied that she knew him only by sight, and was excused without further questioning.

Mrs. Mary Bolton and Mrs. W. R. Johnson testified as to the good character of Frank. Mrs. Bolton worked there six months, four years ago, and saw Frank twice then. She started working again in the factory in June 1913, after the murder.

Charley Lee, a machinist at the factory, was recalled to the stand as a character witness and testified in behalf of Frank. He was cross questioned vigorously by Solicitor Dorsey on his previous testimony about other things.

"You the stand the other day didn't you testify that you signed a paper stating that you witnessed the accident to Duffy?"

"Yes."

Solicitor Dorsey produced a paper which Attorney Haas had handed to him. He showed the paper to the witness.

"Your signature's not on that, is it?"

Lee replied: "No, sir. I never told you I'd signed the paper."

"Didn't you tell me the other day, and again just a moment ago, that you had signed the statement?"

"No, sir. I said I had made a written statement."

"Was it in your handwriting?"

"No, sir, I think it was typewriten."

SIGNED STATEMENT.

The witness then said that about a year ago, at the time Duffy was hurt, he told a man whose name he did not know, the details of the accident suffered by Duffy. This man went into the office and wrote it down on a typewriter, said he, and called him in to approve it when it was finished. The witness testified that he saw the statement two months ago when Herbert Schiff called him into the office and asked him if he remembered making the statement.

"Did you see your signature on that?" asked the solicitor.

"No, sir."

"Did you notice whether or not it was typewriten?"

"No, sir."

"What did you put in your statement?"

"I told all about it."

"Where did you say that Duffy was hurt?"

"On the forefinger of the right hand."

"What was Duffy doing when he was hurt?"

"He wasn't doing anything. He was standing by the machine."

"Then Duffy wasn't putting a roll of brass on the machine when he was hurt, was he?"

"No, sir I had just put that on."

Lee then told about Duffy being taken to the front office, and from there to the Atlanta hospital for treatment.

"What date was this?"

"November 2 I think."

The witness was excused and a recess of about five minutes was taken.

Mrs. J. G. Wardlaw was the next witness. She was married three weeks ago. Her name previous to her marriage, she said, was Miss Lula McDonnell. She testified that she worked at the factory four years and that she quit there about a month ago. She testified that she knew Frank's character to be good.

Solicitor Dorsey stated that he was going to ask the witness a question to which the defense already had, objected, and he suggested that the jury be excused while the point was argued and the question was asked.

FRANK'S MOTHER LEAVES.

Mrs. Rae Frank, the mother of the defendant, put her hands over her ears and then as the jury went out she also left the court room.

The question asked by the solicitor was whether or not the witness ever had heard of Frank going to Hapeville with a little girl on the Saturday afternoon before Mary Phagan was killed, and whether or not Herman Stanton and H. M. Baker were the motorman and the conductor on that car.

To this question the witness replied in the negative.

The solicitor then asked whether or not she had heard that Frank put his arm around the girl and tried at several stations to get off the car and go with him to the woods.

To this question also the witness replied in the negative, somewhat emphatically.

Attorneys for the defense did not push their objection to these questions, and accordingly the jury was recalled and the questions were asked again in its presence, the witness again replying twice in the negative.

The following witnesses then were called and testified to Frank's good character: Sig Montag, Frank Ziganke, an employe of the pencil company; N. V. Darley, manager of the factory; E. F. Holloway, watchman.

DENIES FRANK'S "PEEKING."

Miss Emily Mayfield, one of the girls who was in the dressing room when Frank came and looked in (according to the testimony of Miss Irene Jackson, Saturday,) was called. In response to questions by Attorney Arnold she denied that Frank ever had come to the dressing room while she was there, dressed or undressed, and denied that she ever had heard of him going to the dresing room while any other girls were there.

Solicitor Dorsey questioned Miss Mayfield closely in an effort to shake her denial, but did not succeed.

DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

Mr. Arnold commenced introducing the documentary evidence tendered by the defense. He explained to the court that the model of the pencil factory "has been marred by a slight disturbance between two gentlemen." The state waived objection, and the model went in.

Mr. Arnold then put in evidence, without objection, the financial sheets of the pencil factory from July 1, 1912, through the week ending April 24, 1913.

Mr. Arnold introduced a letter from Leo Frank to Moses Frank, his uncle, at the McAlpin hotel, New York. "We have no objection now to this," said the solicitor.

Without comment from the solicitor, the defense entered the following documentary evidence: The data from which the financial sheet for April 24 was compiled, as identified by Herbert Schiff; record of employes for week ending April 24; requisition bearing date of April 26; ten orders bearing date of April 26, identified by Miss Hattie Hall, stenographer of Montag Brothers; carbon copies of ten letters written by Miss Hall at Frank's dictation, April 26, identified by Miss Hall; pecking reports for week ending April 24; page 195 of cash book, bearing dates April 21 to April 26; specimens of cabbage introduced by Dr. T. H. Hancock; four signed statements by James Conley, dated May 18, 24, 28 and 29, and records of three convictions of the witness C. B. Dalton.

An indictment against C. B. Dalton by the grand jury of Walton county, charging violation of the prohibition law, was ruled out upon objection by the state.

SCOTT'S STATEMENT.

Solicitor Dorsey waived identification by Stenographer Crusselle of the records of the coroner's inquest. Attorney Rosser introduced that part of the record of testimony given by Harry Scott, Pinkerton detective. Mr. Rosser said that Scott's testimony was introduced to show two things: first, that Scott did not say that according to Gantt Frank was fmiliar with Mary Phagan, and second that Scott swore at the inquest that Frank told him that when Mary Phagan asked if the metal had come he replied "No." In his statements on the witness stand in court, Scott said Frank told him his answer was "I don't know." Mr. Rosser introduced also Scott's report to his agency, bearing date of April 28, in which Scott said that Frank told him that he, Frank said "No," when Mary asked if the metal had come.

Attorney Rosser read another portion of Detective Scott's testimony at the coroner's inquest, in which Scott testified that he had heard no part of the conversation of the meeting between Frank and Dave at the police station a few days after the murder. This went in without objection.

SCENARIO INTRODUCED.

The defense then introduced the scenario of the movements of Dr. Owen and his aides and re-enacting the story told by Conley.

Attorney Arnold announced that the defense wanted to introduce some other papers and documents by which Conley was released from the tower. Solicitor Dorsey had agreed to turn the papers over to him, he said. The solicitor assured the defense that he had the reply by Attorney Rosser, for Frank, and the reply of Jim Conley, but not Jim Conley's original petition. "I will object to their introduction, however," said the solicitor. He declared the papers to be immaterial and would merely encumber the record. Judge Roan after a short argument by Attorney Arnold held that the papers would be admissible.

Attorney Rosser then read a portion of Call Officer Anderson's testimony before the coroner's jury. It related to the story told to Anderson by Lee about the first discovery of the body. Solicitor Dorsey asked Attorney Rosser if it was for the purpose of impeaching Anderson. "I take it for granted that he had just forgotten," said Mr. Rosser. The point was admitted.

Attorney Rosser read the inquest testimony by Newt Lee to the effect that Frank took longer to put the tape in the time clock the second time than it did the first. This testimony record was admitted.

A diagram showing the location of the Selig home and the streets near it, was offered and admitted.

BLUE PRINTS ACCEPTED.

Diagrams of all the floors of the pencil factory, made by Civil Engineer Kauffman, as well as a diagram used by the pattern maker in constructing the model of the factory, were offered and admitted.

A score or more photographs of the factory, Frank's office, and the Selig home, were offered and admitted.

The part of the pay envelope which Pinkerton Detective McWorth said he found near the elevator was admitted.

Attorney Arnold addressed the court. "We want now to introduce the check book of Leo M. Frank from September 28, 1912, up to and including the time of his arrest. We expect to follow it with his bank pass book," said he.

Solicitor Dorsey objected to their introduction on the ground that they proved nothing. Attorney Rosser said "I understand you called on us for them once." Solicitor Dorsey replied that he had no recollection of it if he did. Attorney Arnold addressed the court.

"One of our objects in introducing these books is to show that Frank had only $200 at the time of his arrest. This negro Conley said Frank gave him $200 and took it back, and we want to disprove that."

Solicitor Dorsey objected, and the defense announced that Monday afternoon they would have the check and pass books identified and would make further effort to introduce them.

Attorney Arnold then said that the lathe machine on which the hair is supposed to have come from Mary Phagan's head was found, would be brought to the court room and offered as evidence; as well as boards taken from the floor of the metal room.

Court then adourned until 2 o'clock.

The stage was set for Frank to go on the stand Monday afternoon.

Attorneys for the defense stated that they believed Frank would take the stand within less than fifteen minutes after court resumed.

DIES DREAMING OF LITTLE PHAGAN GIRL

Mary Phagan's Grandmother Dies at Family Residence After Dream of Mary

Just a few hours after she had dreamed that little Mary Phagan was alive and in the room with her, Mrs. A. E. Benton, the grandmother of the murdered girl, died at 9:40 o'clock Sunday night of old age infirmities, aggravated by grief over Mary's fate.

Saturday night she dreamed that Mary was alive and well and at her bedside. It may have been the illusion of delirium preceding the final collapse of her faculties. At any rate, when she waked Sunday morning, she told her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of the murdered child, that Mary had been with her in her dreams. She described vividly how Mary looked, and seemed happy over her dream.

"My mother's eyes were bright when she told me of this, and I thought she was better," said Mrs. Coleman. "Later I learned that the cruel cause of their brightness. My mother's one hope and prayer was that she might live until the end of the trial now going on."

Mrs. Benton had been grieving profoundly ever since the first shock of Mary Phagan's murder prostrated her last April. She was then unable to attend her granddaughter's funeral. But she rallied gradually, and was strong enough to be present at the opening of the trial. The first two days of the ordeal were too much for her, however, and she was forced to go to bed. From then until the end she did not arise again.

Mrs. Benton was 73 years old. She died at the home of Mrs. Coleman, 704 Ashby street, Atlanta. She had been living with her other daughter, Mrs. J. F. Barnes, in Marietta, but came to Atlanta to attend the trial. Besides those two daughters, she is survived by four sons, Mr. Jack Benton, of Riverside, and Messrs. Hardy, Thomas, and Durell Benton, of Atlanta. All of her children were at her bedside when death came, and she was able to recognize them until her eyes closed.

Mrs. Benton will be buried in the old family cemetery in Sardis churchyard, near Marietta.

The body was taken to Bloomfield's chapel and will be sent to Marietta Monday afternoon about 5 o'clock. The funeral services will be held at Sardis church, near Marietta, and the interment will follow in the church yard.

Going to Germany

BERLIN.—Great preparations are being made at Neu Strelitz by the court for the approaching visit of Queen Mary. After spending two weeks with her grand-aunt and the dowager grand duchess, the queen intends visiting the crown prince at Danzig and also to inspect her regiment, the Prussian Hussars, at Stolp.

The Prince of Wales too, also visit the ceremonies. It is announced that Prince Albert will begin hi ster mof study at Heidelberg in October.

Attache at Frank Trial Shocked by Wire Near Court

A flurry of excitement was caused just outside of the doors of the Frank trial, Monday afternoon, when John Cox, attached to the office of R. R. Arnold, defending Frank, was shocked by a live wire only partially insulated.

Cox noticed a pile of old rope soaked with elevator grease, smoldering in the corner of the elevator shaft. Fearing a fire that might destroy the court house, he strove to cut the wire, and was badly shocked. He recovered sufficiently at once however to clear away the old rope and remove the immediate danger of a serious fire.

AUGUSTANS MOTOR HERE TO MEET NEWLYWEDS

The Augusta automobile party, composed of Frank H. Barrett, Thomas Barrett, Jr., E. Hoke and W. H. Lanier, Jr., which arrived here Friday afternon of last week, left Sunday morning for Athens, whence they will return home.

The visitors came to Atlanta for the express purpose of meeting Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Irvin, Jr., at the Union passenger station Saturday afternoon, following their romantic marriage in historic St. aul's Episcopal church early that morning.

Mrs. Irvin was formerly Miss Mariam Martin, the only daughter of Mrs. Alfred M. Martin, and an acknowledged society belle. The wedding was the culmination of a romance of many years' standing, and came as the climax of the prison being called to Austin, Tex. ,where a responsible position had beenoffered him.

When it become known in Augusta that the wedding was really to take place on last Saturday, the four friends of the contracting parties immediately seized on the leda of motoring here and surprising the couple at the depot upon their arrival.

Vow to "Kill the Sahibs"

CALCUTTA.—Mr. Nelson, additional magistrate, who has been specially appointed to try the Barisal conspiracy case in which forty-four men are charged with attempting to start a revolution), during the proceedings read a letter saying that he would be shot dead unless he resigned and went home. "We have taken a vow," continues the letter, "before the Goddess Kali that we shall try our best to kill as many Sahibs (white men) as we can."

Madman and King Alfonso

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

MADRID.—As King Alfonso in his motor car was entering the principal gate of the palace at Madrid a suspicious looking man, attired in a long blouse, rushed to the back of the car. He was immediately arrested by a policeman. When questioned he talked incoherently and appeared to be insane. He said he was the sultan of Morocco and wished to crown prince at Danzig and also to inspect her regiment, the Prussian Hussars, at Stolp.

As recently as the middle of April a man fired three shots at King Alfonso in Madrid, but his majesty escaped unhurt.

BACON FEARFUL WHILE WAITING LIND'S WORD

Embargo on Arms May Be Lifted—Federals Win in Long Battle

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Administration officials appeared to be less optimistic today over the Mexican situation but still were waiting some word from John Lind, which should make possible publication of President Wilson's views, already in the hands of the Huerta government.

Chairman Bacon, of the senate foreign relations committee, conferred with the president.

"At least we have done our duty," said he, when leaving the executive offices, where he discussed possible rejection of the view for the United States. "We have shown the world our friendly intentions and it will not be our fault if the suggestions are rejected."

There was an undercurrent of discussion of possible alteration of which lifting the embargo on arms was one. Mr. Bacon declared that would be done only after all peaceful means had failed.

White House officials intimated the United States would take a deep interest in proper protection for William Bayard Hale, President Wilson's friend, who has been sending reports from Mexico. Though Hale has no official status, his presence has been hotly attacked by Mexican newspapers.

Constitutionalists Meet Defeat in 3-Day Battle

EAGLE PASS, Mexico, Aug. 18.—The constitutionalists were defeated in their three days' battle last week near Abasolo, about 100 miles south of here in Coahuila. They retreated Saturday and yesterday, declaring they had not sufficient ammunition to reply to the federal fire. About seven thousand men were engaged on both sides in this campaign. No estimate of killed and wounded has reached here, although several wounded constitutionalists have been brought to Fedrisas for care.

Jesus Carranza, brother of the constitutionalist leader, has gone to the front with reinforcements today. Meanwhile the result of the federal success seems to be the driving of a wedge northward pointed to the capital of Carranza's stronghold, and this wedge seems designed to separate him from his military capital at Piedras Negras.

According to Juan Dozal, ex-colonel of the constitutionalists, General Francisco Villa at the head of 15,000 troops is marching south from Ascencion, Chihuahua, to San Buenaventura, about sixty miles west of Gallegos Station on the Mexican National railroad. United states army advices are that Villa's entire army has moved southward, presumably in the direction of the Madera lumber district.

Constitutionalists here are reticent in regard to Villa's latest movement. They do not admit that he will attempt an attack on federal provision trains, which are landing in Juarez to leave for Chihuahua.

Colonel Toribio Ortega, leading the reconnoiter of his band that attempted to capture federal trains at Bancheria two weeks ago, is at San Buenaventura waiting for Villa's main column, federals say.

THAW WRITES TO HIS MOTHER AS HE FLEES FROM INSANE ASYLUM

brought back to New York from Pennsylvania. I shall consult counsel." Mrs. Thaw said this afternoon.

"I don't want Harry to jeopardize himself by coming to Ohio Rural. I want him to come there under circumstances that will not detract from the pleasure of his visit, that will not mar his happiness while there."

Harry Thaw's more than 24-hour absence from the Matteawan asylum for the criminal insane had established this fact little beyond the fact that he had escaped and that the state of New York, in the opinion of those qualified to speak, had slim chance of extraditing him. That he is beyond the borders of the state was regarded as certain. With the Connecticut state line only thirty miles from the asylum, Thaw and his conspirators traveling by automobile more than sixty miles an hour, reaching Connecticut was a matter of thirty minutes or less.

Whether the slayer of Stanford White boarded a yacht off South Norwalk, Conn.—a theory advanced by the police and sailing from there yesterday afternoon of a yellow funneled craft—had not been borne out today. On the other hand, no authenticated trace of Thaw has been found in Connecticut, nor was there clews of his having sped on toward the Canadian border. When found—and it was considered today a foregone conclusion that he would be found—the New York authorities, it was said, might try to force his extradition on one of two grounds. First, that in escaping he technically assaulted a keeper; second, that burglary of some attache of the asylum could be shown. Either of these if sustained would constitute an extraditable offense.

Howard Barnum, a gate keeper, past whom Thaw darted through the open gate and dashed into an automobile, remained in jail at Poughkeepsie today. He maintains that he was innocent of implication in any plot.

MOTHER'S JOY UNFEIGNED.

In New York Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, mother of the fugitive, continued today to receive visitors at her hotel apartments, to all of whom she expressed her unfeigned joy at her son's escape, meantime indignantly denying that the Thaw family had any knowledge of the matter until newspaper men told them.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, lamenting that her husband is at large, pronounced him dangerous to the community and applied for police protection.

She recalled his threat to kill her and predicted he would be true to his reputence on the New York stage at this time had goaded him to dash for liberty.

YACHT IDENTIFIED.

The yacht seen off South Norwalk, Conn., yesterday, was identified today as the pleasure boat, property of Robert T. Fowler, a New York carpet dealer. Mr. Fowler said that he had passed Norwalk in the craft about the time reported yesterday, but that he was amazed to know that this incident had been connected with Thaw's escape.

Lawyers seem to be unanimous today in the opinion that there is no hope for extradition if Thaw were found in any other state. His whereabouts today was a matetr of conjecture, the theory being, however, that he is on board a yacht, seeking escape to Europe, or else still in hiding in New England.

The Matteawan asylum is only thirty miles from the Connecticut state line and the mysterious high powered car which carried Thaw away probably crossed it well within an hour after leaving the hospital.

The opinion that Thaw is altogether safe from extradition is backed officially in many quarters, including a pronouncement by District Attorney Charles whose husband is one of the members of the 1eo M. Frank trial jury and has been away from home as completely during three weeks past as if he had gone to California or somewhere else.

S. Whitman, who telegraphed as follows from Bretton Woods, N. H., in answer to an inquiry:

"Thaw was acquitted and there is no indictment pending against him in New York. He cannot be extradited."

It is coincident that the New York State Bar association is now contending for a mediation of the verdict in such cases as Thaw's. The statutory verdict in the case of a person who has committed murder and who is proved to have been insane at the time is "not guilty by reason of insanity" according to the present law.

The bar association has been vigorously pressing for a statutory verdict such as "guilty but insane," as is provided in England, where such a person is a criminal and can be recovered by extradition.

Under the present laws here there is only one slight loop with which the New York authorities might draw Thaw back from another state. Some lawyers point out that if it is shown that Thaw had bribed any state official to aid him in his escape he might be extradited.

On the other hand, as a person adjudged insane cannot be tried for his act, the futility of attempting to indict Thaw for bribery or any similar crime becomes apparent.

Thaw's escape ended a flight which he has kept up for the past six years to gain his freedom by legal process. It is estimated that members of his family have spent nearly a million dollars in defending him at his trial for the slaying of Stanford White and in attempting to secure his liberation from Matteawan. Former District Attorney Jerome once estimated that the trial and hearings have cost the state of New York half a million dollars.

Thaw Said to Have Been Seen in Massachusetts

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 18.—Two men, one of whom closely resembled Harry K. Thaw, spent the night at a local hotel and left early this morning without waiting for breakfast.

Will Thaw Receive Income From His Father's Estate?

PITTSBURG, Aug. 18.—The orphans' court of Allegheny county is to decide during the September term whether Harry Thaw is to receive the income from his father's estate, which since 1908 has been accumulating in the vaults of the Fidelity Title and Trust company of Pittsburg.

Thaw recently demanded $30,000 from the trust company and Judge Miller granted a rule on the trust company to show cause why the money should not be paid. The trust company answered it was willing to pay if the court ordered.

By the will of his father, William Thaw, Harry Thaw was to receive $2,400 a year with the provision that if the executors decided he showed capacity for management he should be paid one-fourth of the share of the estate.

In 1893 the executors gave him $144.-625, the one-fourth, and the trust company paid him the income from the remainder until 1908 when Thaw declared payment was stopped. This accumulated income now amounts to $160,780 and according to the trust company's report filed in court, the remainder of his estate now amounts to $442,342.71.

Thaw and Sister Said To Have Reached Coast

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 18.—While the police of Connecticut cities were seeking for Harry Thaw today, R. H. Fitch, a business man of Milen, said he thought he recognized from pictures one of a party of automobilists who passed his home yesterday as the Matteawan fugitive.

"My recollection," said Fitch, "is that the man wore a black mustache, but I remember that it contrasted strangely with his facial appearance. The woman beside him somewhat resembled the picture of Miss Alice Thaw, now Mrs. Geoffrey G. Whitney.

The party inquired the road to Stamford. The theory is that this automobile, and two others that passed the village reached Rehm's Point, near South Norwalk, in the late afternoon, where Thaw board a yacht.

Prison Superintendent Thinks Guard Was Bribed

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—John B. Riley, state superintendent of prisons, who left here today to investigate circumstances of Harry Thaw's escape from Matteawan, declared he regarded as suspicious the fact that the guard failed to overtake the fugitive.

It takes time to start an automobile," said Riley, 'and the mere fact that a car was standing outside the gate when the guard opened it should have aroused his suspicion."

Answering a message of inquiry from Governor Sulzer, Riley stated: "Thaw evidently bribed guard to open gate."

Guard Barnum Is Arrested for Bribery

(By Associated Press.)

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Howard Barnum, the Matteawan attendant who opened the gate through which Harry Thaw escaped yesterday, was arraigned here today o na warrant charging him with bribery. He asked for counsel and the hearing was delayed. Barnum was reticent, but continued stoutly to assert his innocence.

Warrants were issued at oughkeepsie today for the five men who aided Thaw in his getaway.

SHOWERS BRING LITTLE RELIEF TO TORRID WEST

Kansas and Missouri Still Bake Under Temperatures of 100 Degrees

(By Associated Press.)

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 18.—Additional showers were reported in parts of Missouri and Kansas last night but the status of the drouth, according to reports reaching weather bureau, is not greatly changed generally. Great relief was experienced from rains of Saturday and yesterday and a temporary drop in temperature, but the heaviest precipitation rarely passed 1-2 inches, and wide and many sections were only lightly sprinkled.

Where rains were as light as half an inch the baked ground drank the water and a day or two of hot sunshine will leave the soil where it was before the rain, it is said.

Relief to crops in Missouri is reported greater than in Kansas.

From the St. Joseph district farmers report pastures freshened and late corn give no chance for life.

Reports from Pittsburg, Kas., today say that section has had practically no relief. The showers of Saturday and Sunday were too light either to moisten the soil or replenish dried wells, and today the sun again burned in a cloudless sky promising to send the temperature above 100.

The Topeka weather bureau reported prospects for another day with temperatures around the 100 mark in Kansas generally. Rains of lasting benefit in the state have not covered wide areas, and reports still reach the state capital of suffering from exhausted water supply.

"CATTLE QUEEN" LEASES TOWN AS CELEBRATION

(By Associated Press.)

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Col., Aug. 18.—Anna Bernard, known in Colorado as the "cattle queen," last night was acquitted by a jury of the charge of cattle stealing. "Queen Anne" and friends than leased all the motion picture theaters in the town for the night and all business houses and saloons closed, while the people o fthe city celebrated her acquittal with her. Bonfires were built and men, women and children marched through the downtown streets shouting and singing.

QUARTERLY REPORTS NOT NECESSARY NOW

Law Which Made County and State Officers Submit Them No Longer Valid

State and county officers who receive their compensation in fees will not have to make any further quarterly reports to the comptroller general. The law passed by the general assembly of 1912 simply provided for these reports for the first two quarters of 1913, or up until the meeting of this year's legislature.

The object of the law was to afford the legislature of this year data upon which it could frame a general law substituting a statewide salary system for the present fee system. Comptroller General William A. Wright compiled the statistics and filed them with the clerk of the house, but the general assembly never called for the information.

Comptroller General Wright states that he did not make any especial analysis of the reports, as the law did not provide for that, but he arrived at the conclusion that under the present system the county officers in the city counties were well, if not overpaid, and the officials in the country counties were insufficiently paid.

THEATRES

(Criticisms of initial performances of the local theaters are written by members of The Journal staff. All other matter appearing in this column is furnished by the theater managements.)

FORSYTH—Vaudeville.
BIJOU—Tabloid Musical Comedy.

Toots Pake and her troupe of Hawaiian entertainers will be the feature of the bill at the Forsyth this week. This act was secured in New York at the very last minute on Saturday, when an accident prevented the possibility of the appearance of Frech and Kis in their dance, but their is not a better novelty act in vaudeville than the Pake combination. The Castillions in a beautiful bronze act will be another of the surprise features, and Willie Weston, the character singer, will appear.

With the three features there are four others that will make an entertainment of quality. Clayton Kennard and Mattie Rooney promise to b favorites; Foster and Lovette will be comedy stars; Carlton over the violin will bring herself into popularity and the Nikko Troupe of Japanese will have startling stunts to perform.

"Victory," a great war drama in five complete reels, will be the attraction at the Grand at matinee and evening exhibitions all the week. Ten cents at matinee and 10, 15 and 2- cents at night. All seats reserved.

This picture was made in Cuba some weeks ago, and was presented at a private exhibition in Washington last month, for government officials and then it was that Acting Secretary of the Navy Franklin Roosevelt gave a splendid indorsement of the picture.

The scenes were made, the story told, with the aid and permission of the United States navy. There are battleships, gunboats and army airships used in the picture and the sea and land battles which show Uncle Sam's sailors and marines in action just as they would be in real war.

At the same time, the president reiterated the provision of the United States constitution in regard to the guarantee of a republican form of government to each of the states and indicated that under certain circumstances he would feel it is his duty to intervene, but of course as long as the form of government was not changed he felt that he had nothing to do with the number of such governments the people of a state set up. From the manner of the president and his general attitude on the question, it was inferred that federal troops might be seeking berths in the New York trains about the time one or the other of the real governments of that state tried to set up a military dictatorship. But, the president evidently hopes and believes neither side wlh attempt to go that far.

Sulzer and Glynn to Meet Face to Face

(By Associated Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 18.—The conflict between William Sulzer and Martin H. Glynn over the governorship of New York continued today. A clash of authority was expected late this afternoon at a meeting of the board of trustees of public buildings. The trustees include the governor, lieutenant governor and speaker of the assembly.

The board has authority to designate quarters for state officers and departments and is said to have decided to assign the assembly parlor on the third floor of the capitol as the temporary office of the governor in view of Governor Sulzer's refusal to vacate the executive suite on the second floor.

Mr. Glynn, as acting governor, Senator Roberts, as president pro tempore of the senate, and Speaker A. E. Smith, of the assembly, plan to meet as the board of trustees. Governor Sulzer's friends say he has decided to attend today's meeting, the outcome of which is awaited with keen interest. Chester C. Platt, Governor Sulzer's secretary, is secretary of the board of trustees.

Employes of the executive chamber who have remained loyal to Governor Sulzer may be called upon after the meeting of the board to decide as to whether they will continue to serve Mr. Sulzer or to transfer their allegiance to Mr. Glynn. Failure to recognize Mr. Glynn's authority may result in their pay being held up by the state comptroller.

How Thaw Escaped From Matteawan in Fast Auto

Brushes Past Guard at Gate and Jumps Into Racer, Which Bears Him to Connecticut Border

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Aug. 18.—It was just as the first light of dawn was peeping over the hills around Matteawan that Harry K. Thaw left his room, fully dressed, walked through the store room, and into the outer court. Around him the inmates of the asylum were asleep, all save Howard Barnum, the guard.

Barnum was pacing back and forth near the gate waiting for the milkman. As the wheels of the latter's cart rumbled outside and came to a stop, Barnum unlocked the gate and swung it wide to let him enter.

The milkman's cart had stopped on the side of the road near the asylum gate. Directly across from it a rakish black touring car, sixty-horse power, followed by a black limousine, loafed along and stopped.

If Barnum saw the car he thought nothing of it. Black machines and sable limousines are not uncommon around Matteawan, even at 5 o'clock in the morning. Neither was the appearance of Thaw, standing a few feet behind him, unusual. The imprisoned millionaire had so often declared that only by law would he obtain his freedom, that he had come to be regarded as a "trusty."

Barnum stepped aside to let the milkman enter. There was the spurt of flying feet behind him, a shadow sped past, and Harry Thaw was through the gate and darting across the road. The keeper shouted and started in pursuit, but with a single bound Thaw leaped into the tonneau of the touring car. The wheels turned, the engine quivered for a moment, and the two cars were away down the road in a cloud of dust.

SURPRISE PRESIDENT AROUSED.

The guard stood stunned and watched the machines melt into the misty morning. Then he ran into the asylum, roused the sleeping doctors. "Thaw's escaped! Thaw's escaped!" he shouted, running to the room of Dr. R. C. Kiet, the superintendent of the institution last month, for government officials and then it was that Acting Secretary of the Navy Franklin Roosevelt gave a splendid indorsement of the picture.

The scenes were made, the story told, with the aid and permission of the United States navy. There are battleships, gunboats and army airships used in the picture and the sea and land battles which show Uncle Sam's sailors and marines in action just as they would be in real war.

tune time. With the governorship of New York a tossup, there is little chance that either of the claimants for the seat of power at Albany will have time to take from their own affairs to look after the recreant millionaire. Martin H. Glynn, acting governor, has ordered a sweeping inquiry of the whole affair.

In New York City, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, wife of the escaped Harry, was struck with terror at the news that her husband was no longer behind the high walls at Matteawan, but free to roam at will, with the exception of the state of New York.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw came to America from London a few weeks ago to go to the stage, leaving her baby in that city. The absence of the child was her only consolation, she declared, when informed of Thaw's escape.

EVELYN THREATENED.

"Harry has threatened to kill me," she declared, "and I believe my presence in New York prompted him to escape. There are others, too, Dr. Austin Flint and a lawyer, named Dellafield, are both sworn objects of Harry's vengeance. Harry won't stay in hiding long. He'll be heard from soon. A few drinks make him a raving madman, and when that happens he'll head straight for New York. I am awfully glad my baby is in London, and I think he'll be safe there."

Mrs. Charles J. Holman, mother of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, shared with her her fear of Harry. She urged her to go into seclusion until Thaw is found. This Evelyn refused to do, but at her request guards have been placed at every entrance to the home, both uniformed and plainclothes officers.

In her summer home at Cressen, Pa., another woman, the mother of Harry Thaw, is wild with happiness to know that her son is a free man again. Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw declared that the flight was a complete surprise to her, and that she was going to Matteawan Monday to visit her son. Mrs. Thaw manifested much interest in the state laws which, it is believed, will help Thaw to maintain his freedom. She could not prophesy what her son would do, she said, but ridiculed the statement of Evlyn Thaw that he would seek her out and kill her.

THAW SHOT WHITE.

Harry Thaw shot Stanford White, architect of international fame, in a New York City roof garden, June 25, 1906. Thaw and his beautiful wife, Evelyn Nesbit, artist's model and actress, whom he had married but little over a year before, went to the roof garden together to see the opening performance of a new musical comedy.

A few tables from where Thaw, his wife and two friends sat, was Stanford White and his son. Near the close of the performance Thaw left his seat, walked up and down behind White for a few minutes in close proximity, and fired three bullets into the architect's body.

White died instantly. Thaw stood for a moment over the fallen body, walked to the elevator, and gave himself up to the house detective.

While Thaw stood there with the hand of a policeman on his shoulder, his wife rushed up to him and threw herself into his arms, telling him she would stick to him through thick and thin."

Thaw's first trial resulted in a disagreement. The second he was acquitted on grounds of insanity, and sent to Matteawan as an insane criminal. Since then nearly $200,000 has been spent by him in efforts to free himself by habeas corpus proceedings, appeals and alleged attempts at bribery.

Harry Thaw is thirty-four years of age. He is the son of a Pittsburg mechanic who by small ventures in coal and railroads has amassed a fortune of $40,000,000 at the time of his death. Harry Thaw was allowed by the will $2,500 a year, increased to $6,000 by his mother, an allowance which resulted in his nickname of the "young spendthrift millionaire of Pittsburg."

THE 4 SAVED SAVED CASE

Dr. B. N. Ailsworth, physician, Purvis, Miss., gives interesting details of the cyclone that devastated this section. We quote: "I suppose you saw in the papers that we had a cyclone. It swept our little town about off the earth. Thank Providence my family and self came out alive, but my drug store was swept to the winds. We are picking up slowly. I found four bottles Fulton's Renal Compound unbroken and gave them to a lady whom the other physicians had given up (Bright's Disease). She came to me soon as she heard that I had returned to practice. I put her on the Renal Compound and she is now nearly well. But I need more. Send me two dozen. In haste.

The Doctor has since made favorable reports in several other cases of Bright's Disease in which he prescribed the Renal Compound.

If you have Bright's Disease you owe it to yourself and family to try Fulton's Renal Compound before giving up. It can be had at Edmondson Drug Co., 11 N. Broad St., and 106 N. Pryor St., Atlanta, Ga.

German Army Increase Voted

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

BERLIN.—Germany's plan for largely expanding the army and for raising money for this purpose was advanced a step further when the reichstag passed the army bills. These provide for an increase of the army to 650,000 men, the present number, which is 544,211, and for the raising of the extra money needed.

By next year, when the provisions of the bills have been fully carried out, it is expected that one man in every hundred of the population of Germany will be under arms.

The Socialists voted against the army bill itself, on the ground that such continued increase in armaments provokes mistrust among the nations with which Germany wishes to live on friendly terms. They voted, however, for the 50,000,000 pound war tax and for the new Public Sentiment Backs The Smoke Ordinance.

The earnest and logical appeal of Chairman R. M. Harwell, of the City Smoke Board, for public cooperation in the enforcement of the anti-smoke ordinance should win every good citizen's cordial response. That the people as a whole are zealously in favor of this protective law and of its thoroughgoing application, there can be no doubt. Indeed, the measure was passed as the result of an insistent popular demand, the community realizing that its health as well as its civic reputation was seriously imperiled. Most of the interests directly concerned have shown a commendable willingness to follow the suggestions of the Board and the inspector in abating the smoke nuisance; but in some instances, it seems, there has thus far been a selfish indifference to all official warnings and requests. This attitude is un-Atlanta-like; it is unpatriotic and shortsighted; if persisted in, it will bring its own condemnation and punishment.

"We are experiencing some difficulty," says Chairman Harwell, "with apartment house owners about the regulation of their furnaces. We let the matter go by last winter, but this year we must see that smoky furnaces receive attention. We wish to give the owners every opportunity to remedy conditions and all possible assistance; we hope the owners will co-operate with us."

This word should be sufficient to the wise. It is desirable that every law be administered co-operatively, if it can be; but if not by means of reason and persuasion, then force must be brought to bear. The anti-smoke ordinance was enacted for the people's vital interest. Those who continue to violate it and who show no disposition to observe its fair requirements become enemies of the community and should be dealt with accordingly. The officials charged with carrying this law into effect may feel assured that public judgment is squarely behind them, urging them to do their full duty.

We recommend grape juice for some other statesman we know.

State Aid for Public Health.

There is much significance in the fact that of the forty-one State legislatures which have been in session this year, thirty have enacted laws dealing with the prevention of tuberculosis. It is reckoned that some five million dollars has been appropriated to this end, most of which is for the maintenance of State institutions. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis announces that there are now thirty-nine State sanitariums in thirty-one different states; Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Connecticut each has more than one such sanitarium. Indiana has carried the campaign to the extent of providing for the establishment of county hospitals, while Minnesota and Wisconsin have inaugurated a plan of state subsidies to local hospitals. In addition to the five million dollars appropriated directly by the state governments, it is expected that Congress will set aside a million dollars for the federal public health service which is concerned largely with anti-tuberculosis work.

These facts betoken an earnest, nationwide interest not only in the campaign against tuberculosis, but also in general activities in behalf of public health. It was comparatively a few years ago that the urgent need and the value of government aid and supervision in this matter were realized. Health was hitherto regarded as being mostly an individual problem; now it is regarded pre-eminently as a public problem. The alert citizen realizes that tax money can be put to no better or more businesslike use than the prevention of disease, whether it be tuberculosis, typhoid, malaria or any other malady. This idea is developing itself in the form of carefully planned systems as well as liberal appropriations. Of the five million dollars alloted to anti-tuberculosis work, a considerable portion no doubt will be used for administrative purposes and for research. That sum is but a fragment of all that has been appropriated for State boards of health, which direct enterprises covering the entire field of sanitation and the prevention of disease.

This is cheering evidence, indeed, for, it indicates an awakening of the popular mind to the all-important truth that disease is a serious economic and social problem and that its solution demands society's organized resitance.

Our ex-presidents probably wonder how Wilson turns the trick so easily.

While the congressmen are ordering their fall clothes, they might as well include a winter overcoat.

The Business Depression of War.

The cost of war would be dire enough, were it limited to the season of actual conflict, but not until the tumult and the shouting die does a nation begin to feel the full burden of its debt. The months of struggle are nothing beside the years of depression that ensue. The sacrifice of money and life on the battlefield is followed by a scarcity of labor, and a stringency of credit long after peace returns; and the pains of recuperation, even for the victor, are beyond reckoning. The New York Commercial cites, in this connection, a particularly striking example, that of Italy, which is now wrestling with all manner of industrial problems entailed by its brief campaign in northern Africa:

"Italy wrested Tripoli from Turkey at comparatively little expense in lives and treasure, but the disturbance of industries in northern Italy, the most prosperous and progressive part of the kingdom, has resulted in so much misery that strikes and riots have assumed dangerous proportions. Agriculture was neglected during the war, and the cost of living has risen, while manufacturers find trade depressed and claim to be unable to pay higher wages though the demands of the united workers amount to only half a cent an hour of added pay. Taxes are higher all round and the trouble has been rendered more acute by keeping conscripts with the colors through fear of general war arising out of the Balkan struggle, and the dismemberment of Turkey, which Italy virtually began."

Italy will doubtless emerge from these embarrassments unweakened but how soon that will be is beyond prediction. If she retains her conquered territory, it will prove a rich asset in decades to come; but today her manufacturers, as we are told, find it hard to finance their business operations on account of the general scarcity of money and the high rates of interest; they have stocks of unsold goods on hand and the people are without means to buy. In like manner, all Europe is feeling the economic burden of the Balkan war. Money that might have gone into productive channels has been withdrawn to increase and maintain vast armaments; and the uncertainties of the peninsula conflict have kept the business of the entire continent in suspense.

It is such evidence as this that leads the majority of the American people to approve the wise policy of our government in its dealings with the Mexican situation, and to condemn the jingoes who would needlessly plunge the country into a long-drawn and wofully burdensome war. Should national honor make it necessary to send a United States army across the Rio Grande, the cost of such a step would no longer be open for debate. But until that moment comes, imperatively and unavoidably, the interests of the nation demand that we move with the utmost prudence and restraint.

Present indications all point to a peaceful solution of this problem. The president's special envoy, John Lind, far from being expelled from Mexico or treated with indignity, as was predicted, has been received in a friendly manner; and he is today in practical, if not official, communication with the provisional government. He has already conveyed the preliminaries of the plan he was commissioned to present and within the next few days, it is expected, he will have completed his task.

Besides this, there is reassuring evidence in the attitude of England, Japan and other foreign powers toward the Mexican policy of the United States. These nations have expressed tacit sympathy with our efforts to bring about a quiet settlement of Mexico's turbulent conditions.

There is thus every reason for confidence in the administration's program and no reason whatsoever for doubt or opposition. Certainly, until all peaceful means have proved futile, there should be no insistence upon measures of force that would lead to war.

Decatur's Postoffice

Decatur's good fortune in getting what it wants is due largely to the fact that it deserves what it wants. Thus in its present effort to secure a new postoffice building, this thriving town has only to point to the record of its postal receipts to show that its appeal is timely and fair.

For several seasons past these receipts have exceeded ten thousand dollars annually. Under the rule adopted by the House committee on public buildings and grounds that record places Decatur in the class of communities entitled to a government building. Congressman Howard has accordingly introduced a bill appropriating a hundred thousand dollars for this purpose. Not only Decatur but DeKalb county as well merits this recognition of growth and importance. It is to be hoped the new building will be provided.

OUR DAILY BREAD

VI.—THE BAKERY AND THE WOMAN.

By Frederic J. Haskin

The average housewife in most parts of the country is becoming more interested in her local bakery than in any other food producing establishment. According to a careful estimate made last year nearly half the bread used in the country comes from the bakery instead of the home kitchen. The bakers would be glad to bake all the bread and the average woman would be more than willing to have them do so if she had satisfactory assurance that the bakery product was as clean, nutritious and satisfactory as the loaf she herself could bake.

Many reasons exist for the preference being given to baker's bread. The chief one is economic. It costs practically three times as much to bake bread at home as in the bakery. The relative value of the fuel alone consumed in the baking of a small quantity of bread for a single family is much greater in proportion than that used to bake the same quantity in the large output of a big bakery. The woman who lives in town and bakes bread in a gas range can reckon on this even more readily than the woman who depends upon coal or wood for fuel, but the fuel value actually has to be taken into consideration in most households. The cost of flour and other ingredients when purchased at retail by the housewife is greater than when purchased in large quantities by the baker.

The baker is often able to make a better and more wholesome loaf of bread than can be furnished in the home because his equipment is so much better. He takes no chances, makes no guesses at the relative quantities of his ingredients. Everything is weighed with scientific care and in most bakeries the mixing and kneading is now done by machinery, rendering the process far more thorough than the most patient hand labor can insure. One of the greatest drawbacks to the home baked bread is the uncertainty of the average kitchen range. There is no means of accurately gauging its temperature. The oven of a bakery is equipped with a register of its temperature and a means of keeping it uniform during the baking process.

The housewife of today really has little advantage over the methods her mother employed when it comes to bread baking. The baker, upon the other hand, has taken advantage of every chance or science to help him to produce a loaf of bread which will most nearly approach perfection. In recognition of this no less an authority than Dr. Harvey W. Wiley says: "The baking of bread is an art most successfully practiced by professionals and the American method of home bread baking is not to be too highly commended."

The modern woman agrees with the theory that baker's bread ought to be best for her family providing it is baked under proper conditions. Too often she finds that this is not the case and she is compelled to organize a crusade against dirt and insanitary methods before the bakery product comes up to her high ideal of purity and wholesomsness. At first the bakers were disposed deeply to resent this feminine invasion of their territory. Much opposition was offered to the first reforms suggested. In most towns now, however, a different attitude is apparent. The master bakers, through their organizations, are recognizing the value of securing the good will of the women they desire for customers, and feel that it is worth while to come up to their requirements.

The Housewives' league of New York has been giving special attention to the bakeries of that city since the first of January and issued a special "bakers' number" of the magazine which they publish monthly as the organ of the league. Mrs. Julian Heath, the president of the league, has appeared before the board of health of New York several times in the interest of clean bakeries and is receiving the hearty co-operation of the bakers themselves, who in most cases are anxious to raise the standards of their own calling. Mrs. Heath takes the stand that "the commercialized home industries are still home industries," and urges upon every member of the league the duty of being her own inspector, and of reporting upon the conditions of the bakery from which her daily bread is served.

In some towns the bakers are rising to the occasion by inviting the women to visit their bakeries. In one city a large bakery recently placed a placard in the window reading: "Five hundred dollars reward will be paid to the treasury of the Housewives' league if any bakery in this city can be found in a more sanitary condition than ours. The inspection of each housewife is cordially invited."

In a western town, one of the large bakery plants extended a personal invitation to the members of leading women's clubs to inspect their work and each detail was carefully explained.

While in some towns the work of the women has brought about almost ideal conditions in the bakeries much is left to be accomplished. Bakeries still exist in which flies are found in profusion. A Long Island woman recently reported finding a fly in the middle of a loaf of bread. When she told the baker of the matter he good-naturedly replied: "Well, when it happens again, I will give you another loaf of bread." It did not happen again so far as that woman was concerned, since she promptly turned her patronage to a cleaner shop, and not only her own but the patronage of as many friends as she could influence by telling the story.

In Chicago one of the members of the pure food club was invited to address the bakers' organization and her remarks have been widely circulated in trade journals and commented upon with favor by many master bakers. She summed up the qualities to be desired in the products of a bakery under three heads: Good and wholesome qualities of materials used in the products; cleanliness throughout, including materials, surroundings and handling; reasonable cost. Another woman invited to address a bakers' organization added to these three requisites that of attractive appearance and flavor. She cited the fact that in some large bakeries visited where the sanitary conditions were all that could be desired and the quality of the materials undeniably the best, the flavor of the bread was not equal to that produced in the home oven. In order to gratify the palates of their families the women are demanding that the bakers give them bread which has the so-called home-made flavor, and that the cakes and pies also have the real taste produced by the home cook. This is sometimes lost in the bakery by the large quantity of material handled and to regain it is one of the problems presented by the woman in her demands of the baker.

The Consumers' league of Massachusetts has taken up the conditions of bakeries in a rigid investigation. As a result it has compiled a "white list" of bakeries similar to the list the league has provided for stores and factories. To be placed upon the "white list" a bakery must comply with all the requirements of the league, which are the same as those adopted by the National Association of Master Bakers at its annual convention last September. These requirements include proper lighting and ventilating; freedom from all kinds of vermin; floors, walls and ceilings of impervious material with smooth surface easily kept clean; adequate plumbing; sufficient supply of pure water; health certificates for the employes showing freedom from skin diseases, tuberculosis and other contagious diseases; the enforcement of a regulation requiring the employes to be properly and cleanly clothed in addition to a guaranteed quality of all materials used in the baking products.

DISCARDED THINGS

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

The secret of health is the elimination of waste.

The first thing the physician prescribes usually is a physic. No matter what ails the patient it hardly ever can be a mistake to see that the body is well rid of its waste. If the organs of excretion go on a strike it is fatal.

The same law holds in affairs. Every business man knows what pains he must take to keep his desk clean, and how papers will accumulate on the table and get choked into pigeonholes and obstipate letter files and pile up in drawers and cases. There are so many things we are not quite ready to do today, and tomorrow finds us still indecisive, and so the documents drift into forgotten holes and before long the desk is a jungle of undone matters. It takes moral courage to use the waste basket vigorously.

Some men can work in litter, with papers on their desk like snowdrift, papers stuffed bulging full into boxes, papers on the floor about them, "thick as autumnal leaves that strew the vale of Vallombrosa," but I don't understand how they do it. An unanswered letter haunts me like the ghost of Banquo. An unpigeonholed receipt on my table irritates me like a fly.

The art of life is to discard.

Progress is clogged by the persistent remnants of the outworn past.

Clogged! clogged! clogged! That is the story of the Church, the School, the State.

Clogged with moth-eaten ideas, with traditional passions, with antiquated ideals, with petty moralities!

The past makes the present; the bracts protect the flower; but if the bracts persist and the blossom cannot throw them off they become throttling instruments of death.

The curse and weakness of the law is precedent, of which it boasts.

All unjust privilege is but the constipation of life. When justice refuses to flow, is dammed up by custom, and will not follow in the new channels of reason, there we find the iniquitous, stagnant pools of privilege, full of poison, parasitic lives.

What a world it would be if we could swing forward unhampered by the past!

The past is to teach us, not to bind us. It is a bane and not a blessing if it does not invigorate us to go on.

The world keeps sweet and sound, young and green, because plants die and rot, and the waters flow forever by, and institutions crumble, and old ideas fade, and Nature is strong enough to throw away continually her waste, bring up every spring new flowers, and every autumn new fruits.

Teach the Child Its Importance

(Annie F. McClelland in the Mothers' Magazine.)

Last year a home congress was held in Brussels. Delegates from all over the world gathered to discuss the welfare of the child and the home.

Every delegate agreed that two demoralizing features in the lives of boys and girls are: Failure in the home life to make any effort to give them a productive occupation, and arbitrary effort in the home to impose vocations unfitted in the physical or mental temperaments of the children. One delegate said:

"It is an utter impossibility for any parent to dictate absolutely what a child's future vocation shall be. To attempt it is a crime against all that is natural. In selecting a vocation for a child so that its heart and physical spirit will enter it at their highest key of enthusiasm, great study must be given to the nature of the child. The child also must be consulted. True judgments on its part must be recognized and accepted and faulty ones corrected through diplomtic procedure.

"The impression must never be removed from the child's mind that it is a free agent and that the parent is acting solely in the position of an experienced and loving counselor and guide.

"Home unity and the highest average of working productiveness is impossible in anything where the children are directly or indirectly taught that they are dependent and not independent. To produce the highest degree of usefulness in children they must be educated from babyhood to the idea that in their particular place they are just as important to the home as is the father in his place or the mother in hers. No successful home unity is possible where part of the members of the family work and part are idle. An unfair division of labor is created and the sense of cohesiveness is lost."

And all day long she goes it strong,
With no delaying,
Ever playing,

She plays it over till I'm wild
And over once again,
And if I'm sure it can't endure
She shows new vigor then;
And when she'll buy a new piece I
Am hopeful—hopes will come—
Still her endeavor
Misses never,
"Tum-te-tum-te-tum-te-tum-te-tum-te-
Tum-tum-tum!"
Tum-tum-tum!"

A loud piano player
Intend to purchase soon;
I'll buy her piece and never cease
From playing night and noon;
I'll play it till her soul 'twill fill
And both her ears are numb—
That old familiar,
Almost kill-yer
"Tum-te-tum-te-tum-te-tum-te-
Tum-tum-tum!"

ON THE BANKS OF THE ST. LAWRENCE.

(Written by Elizabeth Ivey and borrowed for this Cattilever of Carmenography from the May Irwin Loan Collection.)

On the banks of the river St. Lawrence
Stand's a fisherman's house near the shore—
The home of my love, my sweet Florence,
The only girl on earth I could adore.
she's the sunshine of her home, gentle and kind;
A sweet, brave girl, fears neither storm nor wind.
She's the pride of the fisher folks, a fisherman's daughter,
Who's at home on the river, loves its blue water.

CHORUS.

Oh, sweet Florence, promise you'll be mine;
I will make you so happy, you will never repine,
We will spend our honeymoon on the old St. Lawrence;
Tell me that you love me better than her blue waters, Florence.

I will take you from your home, dear Florence;
Take you away as my happy bride
Where you'll not feel the zero winters
Nor life of hardship at the fisher's side.
I have built for you a home, my river queen.
Where you will no longer know toil or care;
When I take you off to lands you've not heard of or seen,
When I call you my own sweet Florence so fair.

Our Own Travelogues.

Just returned from Cleveland, Ohio, where Three-Cent Fare is Tom L. Johnson's monument. And it's some Obelisk.

Sir: In Cleveland they have pay-enter cars, where you enter at the back door and leave either back or front, and others which you can leave only at the front. If you carelessly fight your way through a crowded aisle to the back door of one of the latter the conductor says "Naughty, Naughty," and makes you fight your way back again all the way through the car to the front door.

They have pay-leave cars, which you enter at the front door and leave at the rear. That is, going uptown. Going downtown, these are pay-enter cars, and you get on at the back and off at the front.

The reason for this is that these cars run beyond the city limits, where the fare is five cents, and they have to collect from the nickel guys when they get on going into town, and when they get off, going home. All right when once you know about it.

Then there's one more kind of car. It has no endoors, only a side door, and the seats run all around the car. So did I. I got on and sat down in the rear half of the car. Observing the conductor standing at his fare box, I got up and passed out my nickel in. Then I sat down again where I had been sitting. The conductor motioned me to take a seat in the other end of the car. I obediently did so, and ventured to ask why.

"The front end of the car is pay-enter," quoth he, "the back end is pay-leave."

Gosh!

When you want a transfer you buy one of the conductor, paying one cent cash, and when you turn in your transfer on the subsequent line the conductor gives you a cent for it.

A man got off a pay-leave car one day without-giving the conductor anything, and the conductor chased him two blocks into a cigar store. After he had lighted his cigar the man dug up a transfer and collected his cent from the conductor.

I can't swear to this last story. A man told it to me. If it isn't true, it ought to be. All the rest I can swear to, or about, as the case may be.

But the case also is that three cents is two cents less than five cents, and Cleveland's comedy system doesn't alter that important fact in the least.

GOVERNOR SLATON TO ATTEND CONFERENCE

With Mass of Bills to Be Signed, He Looks Forward to Governors' Meeting

Governor Slaton will leave Atlanta next Saturday for Colorado Springs, Col., where he will atend the annual governors' conference. This conference opens on August 26 and iwll continue for three days. The governor will be absent for about a week. He says he has been advised that already thirty-five governors have announced their intention to attend the conference and that the meeting will be the largest and most representative since the conferences were inaugnated four years ago.

Governor Slaton will be kept busy until Wednesday night of this week signing acts of the legislature. About 209 bills were passed and the governor has already approved about 200. Under the law all bills must be disposed of by the governor within five days after the legislature adjourns. Wednesday, therefore, is the last day.

Clerk John T. Boifeuillet, of the house, who is in charge of the engrossing of the bills, stated Monday that his eleven clerks would be kept busy until some time Wednesday afternoon. All bills not signed or vetoed by the governor up to midnight Wednesday will, under the constitution of the state, automatically become laws.

STATE TEACHERS WILL GET $482,503 AT ONCE

Checks aggregating $482,503.32 are being mailed out to the various county boards of education Monday for the payment of the state's school teachers. This is the first payment made the teachers during 1913 and represents a little less than 20 per cent of their annual salaries.

Of the total sum being paid $424,203.32 goes to the teachers of the county schools and $58,300 to the teachers in the town schools.

MILITARY PROMOTIONS ARE PROMULGATED

Two military commissions issued by Governor Slaton were promulgated Monday morning by the adjutant general's department. Alexander H. S. Franklin, of Barnesville, has been reappointed a lieutenant-colonel on the governor's staff, and Sergeant Evan Howell McElmurray, of Waynesboro, has been advanced to the rank of second lieutenant in Company E, First infantry. He succeeds Second Lieutenant S. E. Godbee, who has been promoted to be captain of the same company, which is known as the Burke Light infantry.

THREE WEEKS' REVIVAL AT GRACE METHODIST

OFFICERS HUNT GRIP IN ATLANTA'S DRUG STORES

J. Clack Left Suitcase in What He Thought the Only Drug Store in City

J. Clack, a mechanic, claiming Pittsburg as his home, appealed to the police Monday morning to help him find his suit case that he said he left in a drug store while taking in the sights of the city between trains.

The stranger was frank to admit that he did not know there was more than one drug store in Atlanta and when he went back to loo kfor his baggage he found drug stores had seemingly sprung up out of the ground by the score. He was unable to find the one he first visited.

Detective John Waggoner was assigned to the task of visiting all drug stores with Clack in an effort to locate the lost suit case.

Another Bold Jewelry Theft Stirs Newport

(By Associated Press.)

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 18.—Burglars who entered the Herrmann jewelry store here some time after the place was closed Saturday night, obtained jewels and silverware valued at about $10,000, but were frightened away while additional booty, worth $100,000, was theirs for the taking.

The burglars picked the lock on the front door and forced the locks on four showcases. The missing pieces included twelve dozen stickpins and two diamond brooches.

The police think that the burglars had only begun operations when they were alarmed and withdrew.

Farmers Ask Better Schools

(Galveston News.)

A committee formally credentialed to speak for the two thousand members of the farmers' congress, recently in session at College Station, appeared at Austin a few days ago as a lobby for the cause of education. It came at the call of the legislature and the governor that liberal appropriations be made this year for the state's educational institutions in general and for the agricultural and mechanical college in particular. It did this in the full understanding that liberal appropriations of education will have the effect of further increasing a tax rate that must be abnormally high even if parsimony rather than liberality should prescribe the total amount to be given to our schools. One member of this committee is reported to have said:

"We realize that education is expensive. In fact, I know of but one thing more expensive, and that is ignorance. Four out part, we of the two thousand farmers who were at College Station, are willing to pay the necessary increase in taxes."

This action, we believe, is without precedent in the history of Texas. It is a common thing, of course, for men and delegates having a professional interest to importune the legislature to be liberal in making appropriations for education, but we doubt if ever before a committee, acting by formal direction of a body of citizens who have no professional interest in education, has ever manifested such concern as is denoted by the visit to Austin of these men. It only heightens the uniqueness of the incident that these men spoke of the same end by authority of the farmers, the very class whose name heretofore as been invoked to stay most little disposition there has been to give adequate sustenance to our educational institutions.

"Swear," Said the Bishop

(From Hall's "Retrospect of a Long Life.")

I remember an anecdote of a bishop of Cork, who, voyaging from across the channel in one of the sailing boats, was much shocked by the oath of the captain, and from reasoning and entreaty came to somewhat angry protest.

"Ye see, my lord," said the captain, "unless I swear my men won't obey me."

"Try them," urged the bishop; "try them."

So the skipper at last agreed to do so; but, unknown to his lordship, he arranged a little comedy with the crew. Very soon it came to blow afresh.

"Tom," cried the captain, "roll that rope." Tom never moved, but stood chewing his quid.

"Jack, Bill, Harry," said the skipper, "just oblige me by taking in the topsail." Not a man stirred. The wind howled more and more loudly; the vessel plunged heavily through the waves. Then the skiper turned to the pale-faced bishop, who was watching the result of the experiment.

"My lord, my lord," said he, in a terrified undertone, "what am I to do? If my men won't obey me, we must all go to the bottom."

"Well," said the bishop, slowly and reluctantly, "under the circumstances I—I think you may—swear—a little."

No sooner said than done; a volley of oaths sent Jack, Bill and Hall aloft, and about as quick as lightning sails were furled, ropes rolled, and no more warnings against the sin of profanity were heard during that voyage, at least.

Wayne-Dibble

The marriage of Miss Gertrude Wayne, of Charleston, and Mr. Samuel Wagner Dibble, of Atlanta, took place Saturday morning in Hendersonville, N. C. The ceremony, which was a quiet home event, was performed by Rev. John M. Shive.

After an informal reception Mr. and Mrs. Dibble went to Asheville, and will remain among the mountains until September.

Mrs. Dibble is the daughter of the late D. G. Wayne, of Charleston, and is well known in both Carolinas. Mr. Dibble has many friends in Atlanta, where for years he has been connected with the Constitution.

Maddox-Zirkle

Miss Leonora Maddox and Dr. Clyde Zirkle were married Saturday morning at 11 o'clock at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Maddox, on Howard street.

There were no attendants, and only the immediate families were present.

The house was attractively adorned for the occasion, palms, ferns and smilax forming a green background for beautiful white flowers.

Pink orchids and delicate ferns formed the centerpiece of the table at the wedding breakfast, and the place cards were brides and grooms. The wedding cake boxes were monogramed in gold.

Dr. and Mrs. Zirkle left at once for a month's stay in New York and Canada. On their return they will be at home with Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Zirkle.

Swenson-Bell

Simple in all its appointments was the marriage of Miss Genae Bell and Mr. Joseph Jordan Swenson, which took place Thursday morning at 8:30 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church, says a Birmingham exchange. Only a few friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Dr. J. S. Foster. Before the entrance of the bridal party Miss Flora Jones sang "At Dawning," accompanied by Miss Madeline Smith, who also played the wedding march. Miss Bell's only attendant was Miss Josephine Aldrich, of Rajah Lodge, and Mr. Swenson was attended by Mr. Henry J. Noble, of Anniston, as best man. The bride was attired for traveling in a smart tailored suit of blue with hat to match, and carried bride roses showered with lilies of the valley. Miss Aldrich also wore a blue suit and carried white roses and lilies.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Swenson left to spend several weeks at Wrightsville Beach, after which they will be at home on Woodlawn avenue, North Haven.

Mrs. Swenson is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Bell and a niece of Dr. T. L. Robertson, one of the pioneers of the Birmingham district. Mr. Swenson comes from a prominent Georgia family.

The out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Jordan, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Aldrich, of Rajah Lodge; Miss Helen Robertson, of Atlanta; Miss Mary Robertson, of El Paso, Tex.; Mrs. Swenson, mother of the groom, from Atlanta, and the Misses Easley, of Anniston.

We have had many years of corporation recall of judges. The popular recall will operate far less frequently than the corporation recall has done, and much more considerately to the highest sentiments and feelings of the judges.

Best of all, the possibility of popular recall will relieve judges from all danger of corporation recall.

Few Ships Fly Our Flag

(James W. Curley in National Monthly.)

A most lamentable confession has never been made by the representative of a great country than that of Admiral Sperry, in charge of the American fleet, upon his return after a 25,000-mile journey over the principal waters of the world, when he stated that never once in his entire journey did he behold the American flag flying from a merchant steam vessel.

England today furnishes the ships to carry supplies and fuel to our navy on the Pacific coast, and on the recent journey around the world of the fleet there was furnished the pathetic spectacle of the supply ships accompanying the fleet flying the flags of every nation but our own; our boasted strength as a nation made a mockery for the world.

Ciceley eyed the breadth of faded lawn upon which they worked and her lips quivered. "I don't believe they'll look like anything when they are done," she said. "It's a good thing that skirts are narrower now than when these dresses were made. If the fashion had been reversed I don't know what we'd do. As it is, I'll be ashamed to wear them. Shan't you, Fanny? Especially as all the other girls at the party will have brand-new frocks. And not one of them has a father as well off as is ours."

Without waiting for the girls to move she went to them.

"Or as stingy." Fanny clapped her hands over her mouth, but the words had flown. She colored, conscience smitten. "There! I ought not to have said that. But I thought it, Ciceley. And Mrs. Dimock says that thinking is as bad as speaking any time."

Ciceley glanced from the window. "Speaking of angels, here comes Mrs. Dimock now," she said. "Run and welcome her, dear, I can't put down my work."

Fanny sprang up willingly. Mrs. Dimock was their nearest neighbor and their dearest friend. Just as she had been the friend of their dead mother. She kissed Fanny and patted Ciceley's head. Then she sat down and examined their work.

"Making over, girlies? I'm doing a bit of that myself. I prefer new things right straight through. But Andrew can't afford much dress expense, and I don't ask him to. Besides, I'm an old woman and my looks are gone. But you—" She paused. "I always think young things ought to flower out like the syringa and lilies in spring."

"You see it's Maud Embert's party," Ciceley said. "And we haven't a thing to wear. And we don't dare ask father. He seems worried or something nowadays." She looked at Mrs. Dimock anxiously. "Do you suppose he has been losing money or anything like that?"

Mrs. Dimock drew a deep breath of resolve. "Hasn't he told you?" she asked, quietly.

"Do you know?" Breathless and pale the girls made joint demand.

"Andrew and I both know. We both love you, dear, and we wish the best for you. We know how things always have been here and how they are now. Your mother told me a great many things. And life didn't give her much, I can tell you. And she asked me to see that you girls had it easier than she had had. We tried to do what I could, but I didn't dare try your father too far for fear——. And it's all of a piece with the way he's always acted that he goes now to be married without telling you."

"Married!" gasped the girls. They turned to each other as for mutual sympathy. "And we thought it was business and he was bothered. Oh, Mrs. Dimock!" They burst into tears.

Mrs. Dimock patted each with a tender hand. "There, there," she said. "It was no easy task to tell you, but I felt I must. Especially as he's bringing her home tonight, I suppose."

"Who is she?" the girls asked.

"Her name is Mrs. Warren. She's a widow and from up country somewhere. She's visiting the Reeds over on the mountain. That's where your father has gone to marry her. She's a perfect stranger to all of us, and I'm hoping for the best. But any woman here is gong to be better than none. You must try to be good to her. And now since you know it and must feel kind of upset like, you better come home with me to dinner. Come."

Even the chicken and dumplings and fresh strawberry pie failed to wipe out the effect of disillusion from the girls' young minds.

"I'm afraid," wailed Fanny. "Oh, Mrs. Dimock, I feel like running away. How shall I call her? What shall we say to her? And how shall we act? I wish I knew."

But Mrs. Dimock could not tell them that. She was miserable over the affair herself. She could only kiss them and bid them to be brave like true daughters of their mother.

They were peeking fearfully from the window when they saw their father's rig appear at the head of the long village street. Elwood Ford drove a fancy team. This was his one extravagance. The shining pair under his whip now had cost him more than the entire maintenance of his daughters from their birth. Horses were worth while. Girls were a bother. He therefore made no secret of preferring the one asset to the other. Fanny's hand sought Ciceley's as the black span swung in at the drive and with a loud "whoa!" were halted. Their father helped a woman out of the buggy—a very small woman with a thick blue veil over her face. At sight of her the girls' hearts sank, for they felt instinctively that any one as little as that could be no match for their big, loud-voiced, self-willed father. Their father hitched the horses and brought her into the house.

"I guess they're in here," the girls heard him say. And then the sitting room door opened. "Hello!" said their father. "So you're here, are you? Come, greet this woman. She's coming here to live. She's my wife."

There was underlying threat in the words and the girls shrank under it as if it were a lash. They could not move. They stood hand in hand, pallid, startlingly appealing in their girlish beauty.

The woman, with a deft movement, flung the veil back from her face. She looked at them. She was very small.

A Recent Bride

MRS. JASPER LEE JACKSON,
Formerly Miss Edna Dingler, of Williamson.

"You just come over to see what we've got."

"you'll have to stoop a good ways. You see, I'm not as tall as you are."

The girls looked at her. She was smiling and a dimple had sprung out in her cheek. There was something intimate and human and young in that dimple, and all at once they ceased to fear her. They kissed her. "Being your father's wife," she said, "I am, of course, your mother. But you needn't call me that. Girls can only have one real mother. I only said that to show you what the relation between us is. You may call me Agnes."

At the door Elwood Ford made a motion to depart. She stopped him with a gesture. "Wait!" And to the girls' surprise, he obeyed. "There is something I must say to you here and now. I was led to believe that your daughters were mere children. I find them young ladies." Her eyes met his. They seemed to say succinctly: "This is the first place where I've found you out. Now what are you going to do about it?" As he did not answer, she went on calmly: "Not but what I prefer them grown up. I think we shall understand each other sooner and get along better." She smiled again and the rimples danced. "I hope, girls, you won't be prejudiced against me because I've come in on you this way. You see I didn't know. My intention isn't to be super. It is to be your friend—the kind of friend your mother would like you to have."

It was Ciceley who spoke. Fanny could not. She had lost all self-control and was sobbing. "We need a friend," the girl murmured. "There's never been anybody since mamma went away except Mrs. Dimock."

Three days later the girls ran into Mrs. Dimock's presence, panting star-eyed, flushed with inexpressible happiness.

"Oh, Mrs. Dimock!" Fanny cried, as they flung themselves down on their knees beside her and captured her hands. "You just must come over and see what we've done. New frocks, Mrs. Dimock—and new frocks! Silk, too, with the dearest short sleeves! Mine's blue and Ciceley's is pink. And

And just now she was flushed. She had narrow, intensely black eyes, rather high cheek bones, and a mouth and chin impressive with decision. She looked as if she had not found life easy, but she was determined to get the most out of it. She also looked as if she feared nothing in the whole world. Without waiting for the girls to move she went to them and held out a hand to each.

"If you kiss me," she said quietly, we're going in them to the party! And, listen, there's gloves and shoes and silk stockings to match! And father paid for them without scarcely a murmur. Mother Agnes helped us pick them out. When she said silk we nearly fainted. We never had anything silk before. And, oh, Mrs. Dimock, we're going to have the house done over and some new furniture! And a surprey we can all ride in! And father's willing—not very willing, but then he don't seem to be able to say no to her. She's wonderful, Mrs. Dimock. She manages him. And she's perfectly sweet to us. She said she never had any girlhood to speak of, but she's going to see us have some. She said her first husband was just like father, and she didn't marry him for love. She doesn't talk much, but good things. It's turning out beautiful for us, isn't it, dear Mrs. Dimock?"

"I should say!" Mrs. Dimock clasped them both. "So long as your father had to have a second, thank goodness he got a woman trained for the place," she said.

Education Costly for Them

(Chicago Examiner.)

Education in England of Marshall Henry and Gwendolyn Field, the three grandchildren of the late Marshall Field, costs $1,000,000 a year, according to the British government.

Dispatches received here stated that the English courts had confirmed an assessment of $50,000 against Mrs. Maldwin Drummond, mother of the children.

She had declined to state how much she receives from the Field estate for the education of the children, and the tax was fixed at the income upon $1,000,000. She has taken an appeal.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

When Sammy Jay and Mistah Mocker the Mockingbird put their heads together it didn't take them very long to decide that some one was at the bottom of all the trouble they had had in the old orchard. When Sammy told Mistah Mocker that he hadn't stolen the eggs of Drummer the Woodpecker, of course, Mistah Mocker believed him. You see, he had overheard Sammy saying this very thing to himself, and people usually tell the truth to themselves.

"Have you got any enemies?" asked Mistah Mocker.

Sammy gave him a funny sidelong look. "Everybody's my enemy," he replied shortly.

"Not everybody, Brer Jay! Not everybody!" exclaimed Mistah Mocker.

Sammy laughed. "I didn't mean to include you, Mistah Mocker," said he, "though, it looks to me as if you were trying to get me into trouble when you used my voice to fool your friends in the old orchard."

Mistah Mocker hung his head and looked a little bit ashamed. "That's so, it does look so, Brer Jay; it certainly does look that way," he confessed. "But Ah gives yo' mah word of honor, sah, Ah never thought of that. It was just a joke."

"Jokes that hurt other people are pretty poor things," replied Sammy, and to have made him you would have thoughtthathehad h il hrdletaoishrdr thought that he had never done a mean thing or untold thing in his life. "What hade you think of that particular joke?"

"Why, Ah didn't think of it myself, Brer Chatterer the Red Squirrel gave me the idea," said Mistah Mocker, scratching his head thoughtfully.

"Ha!" cried Sammy Jay, and his eyes snapped. "Tell me all about it."

So Mistah Mocker told how he met Chatterer the Red Squirrel, and how he told him that Sammy Jay and Drummer the Woodpecker had quarrelled and what a good joke it would be for Mistah Mocker to hide in the old orchard and with his wonderful voice make Drummer and his neighbors think that it was Sammy Jay hidden there.

Sammy Jay didn't wait to hear any more. "That's the one that's at the bottom of all our trouble!" he cried excitedly. "I might have known it. They call me a thief, and I suppose that sometimes I do steal, but I'm honest compared to Chatterer the Red Squirrel. Why, I've known him to steal from his own father, and I wouldn't do a thing like that! No, sir; I wouldn't do a thing like that!" Sammy swelled himself up and tried to look the picture of all that is good. "You can depend upon it that Chatterer stole those eggs from Drummer the Woodpecker and laid it onto me. And he used you to get Drummer out of the way. Yes, sir, he used you to help him!"

Mistah Mocker stared a long minute at Sammy Jay. Then he flew into a terrible rage at the thought of how he had been tricked. "Ah, believe you are right!" he cried. "Ah believe you are right!" he chied.

"I know I'm right, snapped Sammy, "When you have known Chatterer as long as I have you will learn that he hasn't an honest hair in his coat. My, but aren't we innocent to let him fool you that way!"

Mistah Mocker hung his head again. "Ah, reckons Ah was," he said. "But the question now is what are we going to do about it?"

"Get even!" snapped Sammy Jay. "Get even with Chatterer! You leave it to me and I'll think out a plan."

Wash Your Sweater Yourself

(Chicago Inter Ocean.)

The topcoat or sweater of white woolen fabric requires very careful washing, but it these directions are followed you will experience no trouble: With tepid water and a cake of white soap make a good suds, and in this place the knitted sweater or jacket and rub or squeeze in homespun. Knead the garment well with both hands and press the water through it. When this water becomes soiled, change it for another, and so on until the garment is perfectly clean. Rinse thoroughly through several clear waters and press the superfluous moisture from the sweater or jacket, but do not wring tightly. This has a tendency to stretch the garment out of shape. Hang the sweater or coat in the open air to dry or spread it on the grass, pinning it in shape. Frequent turnings will help the process of drying, which should be accomplished as quickly as possible.

If the sweater appears to stretch a great deal in the washing, place it over a coathanger and slip into a pillow case to dry. Pin the case together at the top and this will prevent the wool, weighted with water, from stretching.

In winter, when it is an impossibility to hang the sweater out of doors, because of the danger of freezing, dry it in a not too warm oven or over the radiator. If dried in an oven, place it in a pan lined with a towel and turn every few minutes. When thoroughly dried it will be perfectly clean, and the wool in the original condition, soft and fluffy.

The Lone Survivor

(San Francisco Chronicle.)

The vessel fought in the last half hour as it had fought all day—gamely, but without hope. Those who watched from the seashore, saw the wheelhouse, like a smashed match box; saw the ravel, demented movements in the cauldron, drifting here and there, but always, terribly shorward. Sea followed sea in wild confusion, to great jungle of mad monsters, foaming white at the mouth, roaring, snarling, gnashing with vicious teeth. It was nearer now. Only a few minutes to live. A great, shaggy brute, bigger and whiter than the rest, charged it, caught it as it were on its tusks and threw it high to where it struck, beaten at last, with its nose on the outer rocks.

The first rocket was true, but as the line fell across the deck a great green monster sprang forward and downward. Only two men remained where there had been seven. The second line fell clear, but the third landed, and the survivor made it fast to the winch. The chair was half way out to them when the next great charge came. It beat one of them, for, when the sinking cataracts rolled from the deck it was a solitary figure that clung with arms and legs to the slippery mast. The buoy was waiting for him, but he dared not move. He chose his chance well, toppled across the perilous deck and got himself into the seat. Blinded and choked he gripped the rope and was dragged through the welter of waters. His look was the look of a drowned man and his chilled hands had the grip of death, with what seemed a death grip. It was only by force that the rescuers could unloosen the stiffened fingers and carry him to the station.

He gave no sign for a long while, and even when he breathed again an hour passed before he found his tongue. He lay there with blank eyes, his mouth half open, his jaw loose, no look of comprehension on his face. Not a word did he speak until, outside in the shed, the station mascot set to barking at the wind.

Then he moved restlessly.

"Un de ship," he said, very slowly, each word apart. "Un de ship I haf had von little dog."

And he wept, unrestrainedly, as a young girl weeps.

Palmy Days for Poets

(London Chronicle.)

Probably no poet ever enjoyed a greater popularity than Thomas Moore. He was the idol of Ireland. A typical instance of the esteem in which he was held is given in Mr. Stephen Gwynn's biography. In 1835 Moore paid a visit to Shannon. On the approach to this town from Wexford—where Moore was met by his host—the party was encountered by a cavalcade bearing green banners, and so escorted through a series of triumphal arches, where a decorated car awaited the poet, with Nine Muses (some of them remarkably pretty girls) and a crown on his head. It had been arranged that the Muses should follow on foot; but as the crowd passed in Moore made three of them get up on the car."

Molesworth's Men Come to Redeem the Three Straights Dropped Before—Fight for Third Place Continues

Molesworth's Barons are the next on the local card, and they should furnish an attraction, as they are the Crackers' closest rivals for third place. There is only five points or a half game difference between these clubs, and the winner captures third place.

Nay more. The Montgomery team is fast falling, and is only 2 1-2 games ahead of Atlanta, therefore the winner is likely to cop second place with a chance at Mobile before the season draws to a close.

This is the last struggle between the two teams this year, and the Crackers are leading in games won by a large margin, having copped twelve from the Barons.

The opening game will probably see Gil Price twirling for the Crackers and old reliable Hardgrove working out for the Barons. Peppery Chapman will be seen in the line up again, relieving Joe Dunn of some of the heavy work. Chapman has been out of the game for several days on account of a bad ankle, and his presence in the line up has been missed.

The fight for second place will be on in earnest when following the Barons the Birmingham come with bat in hand to defend their standing in three contests. Atlanta is only 2 1-2 games behind, as we have stated, and this series should settle something for good and all if the Birmingham series don't.

Beginning with today's game, the regular time for beginning play will be shoved up from 3:45 to 4 o'clock.

Develop the Young Stars

Avoid the garrulous minor league manager who is in the market in and out of season to unload a prospective phenom. Pay no attention to class D clubs requesting a look at each high school or thither to observe a youngster in action, unless the club is managed by an experienced ball player. Try to establish a baseball college of your own, where farm hands can be taught the game.

This is the advice of Bobby Gilks, Nap scout, to major league club owners, who employ men to scour the bush organizations from April until September. Gilks' ideas are original, particularly the college system, which he hopes to induce C. W. Somers, owner of the Cleveland club, to finance during the winter months.

"I've traveled from one end of Texas to the other; been through Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Oklahoma and other states since the 'flag fell' last spring," said the Nap scout Tuesday, "without running across a single man that gave promise of developing into a big leaguer two years hence.

"Phenoms by the dozen have been recommended by friends throughout my territory, but none of the recruits looked good. Never before in my life have I seen such poor material, and the major league clubs will be worse off next spring than during the last five years, for the youngsters expected will not be able to deliver the goods.

What baseball needs more than anything else, according to Scout Gilks, are players who will be able to step in and take the places of Cobb, Jackson, Baker, Collins, Lajoie, Plank, Bender, Coombs, Grenn and other stars as soon as they commence to fade. The problem to find the embryo stars has to be solved very shortly, for every day finds some of the greatest players the sport has ever known becoming slower and slower. To obtain the future stars, Scout Gilks has a notion that he can get at least two high class men every season at less than half the expense which is paid for class A or B players every season, not to mention the saving of time, money and continuous worry that some club will snatch a player that may develop, if overlooked by the scout employed through a mistake in judgment.

Gilks' idea is to purchase a tract of land in southwest Texas and lay out a ball field. This finished, the Nap scout will send a dozen cattle rustlers that have never seen a baseball, all under twenty years of age. The men will be signed to contracts and placed under the supervision of a baseball coach, who will stop and taught how to throw a ball. The men will be allowed so many hours per day for practice, attending a night class in order to grasp the idea more rapidly.

SOUTHERNERS WHO STARRED

Joe Jackson only connected once in four times up. He is credited with an assist from the outfield.

Tris Speaker also was up four times and got one hit.

Yerkes was used as a pinch hitter and did not connect.

Mike Balenti was up twice without a hit or run.

Derrill Pratt batted .500 in four times up, one of his hits going for three bags.

Langford Will Fight Johnson

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Sam Langford, the Boston Tar Baby, has been matched to fight Jack Johnson in Paris for the heavyweight championship of the world. The fight will take place in the fall.

Langford's manager, Joe Woodman, has received cable advices from a leading French promoter, who says that he already has signed Johnson to articles of agreement for a twenty-round battle with Tar Baby in Paris next October or November. Johnson will receive $20,000 guarantee, win, lose or draw, and Langford has received an offer of 25 per cent of the gross. In Paris it is figured that this fight will draw a $100,000 gate. Woodman will cable his acceptance and Langford will sail for the other side about the middle of September.

The Tar Baby before leaving is planning to take part in two bouts on American soil. One will be a ten-round affair with Joe Jeannette on or about September 3. The other will be with Porky Flynn, the Boston white hope. If Flynn will accept a challenge and a club can be found which will stage the match.

Langford is extremely bitter toward Flyn because the latter declared some time ago after a trip to the Antipodes that the Tar Baby was a back number. Langford wants to prove to Flynn's entire satisfaction that such is not the case.

In finally cornering Johnson, Langford's unceasing desire for four years to get a match have been rewarded, but he says he will not believe that Johnson is willing to try conclusions with him until the champion actually appears inside the ropes. If the fight takes place Langford will receive big backing, especially in Great Britain.

Earl Moore Going Back

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 18.—Earl Moore has been sold by the Philadelphia team to the St. Louis Cardinals. Moore has been with the Phillies for six seasons. At first he was very effective, using a cross fire with terrific speed behind it. "Hans" Wagner, the champion batsman for so many season, once said of him, "Moore shouldn't permit a base hit in a game when his cross fire is working perfectly." During the last two seasons "Ebby" has had trouble in getting his cross fire over the plate, and when forced to resort to his fast ball straight over was hit hard. His close friends know that he tried hard to win and was worried over his failure. They will be hopeful for his success in St. Louis. Moore pitched his first professional ball with the Cleveland Americans. He injured his foot and was sent to Jersey City. The New York Americans tried him out, but sent him back to the "Skeeters." Billy Murray brought him to the Quakers City with McQuillan, and "Ebby" has been there ever since. He joined the Cardinals in New York. Earl was finishing a three-year contract at a salary said to be $4,000, and the Cards must assume that agreement. It is believed that $3,000 was the price paid for the pitcher.

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

Montgomery continued her losing habits and dropped a double-header, Mobile breaking even with the tail-enders. This put Montgomery and Atlanta only 2 1-2 games apart.

The National standings are unchanged.

The Naps succeeded in putting it over their rivals, the Athletics. This time they simply bended by capping in his delivery until he retired from the box. The difference between these clubs is now 83 points or 3 1-2 games.

England's second aerial derby will occur on Saturday, September 20. The course which commences and finishes at the London Aerodrome, Hendon, extends over a distance of nearly 100 miles making a complete circuit of London.

TUESDAY SOCIETY NIGHT FOR THE MOTORDROME FANS

Society night is the next event which is to be pulled off at the motordrome, and bids are being made for the attendance of Atlanta's elite.

Rain hurt the Tuesday races last week in the following manner: A lot of "good fellows—sports," or whatever you want to call them, make dates with their girls for the races and then when they are postponed, are otherwise occupied. Consequently when they are run, the good fellows are otherwise engaged. For this reason every effort will be made to run the races off Tuesday night.

The program includes several good events as follows:

Motordrome Purse—Heats, 1 mile, final two miles, winner in each heat and second man in fastest heat:

First Heat—Graves, Swartz and Lockner.

Second Heat—Richars, Luther and Renel.

Third Heat—McNeil, Lewis and Glenn.

Three-Cornered Match Race—Three heats, one mile, two miles and three miles:

First Heat—Glenn, McNeil and Swartz, one mile.

Final Motordrome purse, two miles.

Second Heat—Three-cornered match race, two miles.

R. F. Maddox Sweepstakes—French point system, 10 for first, 8 for second and 2 for third; three heats, two, four and six miles:

First Heat—Two miles, Graves, Richards, Luther, Lewis, Renel and Lockner.

Third Heat—Three-cornered match race, three miles.

Second Heat—Maddox Sweepstakes, four miles.

Third Heat—Maddox Sweepstakes, six miles.

FORMING OUTLAW LEAGUE IN THE SOUTHERN CITIES

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 18.—A new baseball league in the south, that will, of necessity, be an outlaw organization, is to be organized under charters that will be filed in eight southern cities Monday, according to plans of the promoters that have been under way for months and are now perfected.

Chattanooga, Atlanta, Birmingham, New Orleans, Memphis, Nashville, Little Rock and Shreveport are to compose the eight-club circuit. Memphis promoters are behind the scheme.

Judge Bacon, a prominent attorney and judge of the city council of Memphis, is to be president of the new organization, which will be called the Dixie Baseball league. Judge Bacon was formerly president of the Fraternal league of Memphis. Harry N. Pharr, a consulting engineer, also of Memphis, is to be secretary.

It is said the Dixie league is to be associated with the Federal league.

It is declared that the league is backed by an ample capital to insure its success and that it is not dependent upon the sale of stock for permanent life.

Don't Want a War With Southern Clubs

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 18.—Judge William J. Bacon, of Memphis, who is to head the proposed Dixie baseball league, stated last night that the promoters of the new league had no intention of initiating a baseball war in the south. Efforts will be made, he said, to effect an agreement with the Southern league clubs in the several cities and, if possible, secure recognition of the National Association of Minor League clubs.

"We believe that the cities where there is already organized baseball, and where we propose to place clubs, can support two teams," Judge Bacon said, "and that a harmonious agreement between the Southern and Dixie league representatives would be of mutual benefit. Non-conflicting schedules might be arranged and a friendly rivalry would work to the good of the game in the south."

Judge Bacon stated, however, that ample capital is behind the new organization to insure its success as an independent league or to operate in conjunction with some other "outlaw" league.

It is understood that if recognition is secured post-season series for the southern championship and local interleague games will follow.

Judge Bacon said that a meeting of representatives of the different clubs is to be called after the charters are filed tomorrow to definitely determine as to procedure to be followed.

Atlanta Club Good in Field

Reviewing the past Chattanooga-Atlanta series "by way of figures" some startling dope is brought out. To start with the 'Noogas only out-hit Atlanta one point and their fielding average was thirty-four points below that of the Crackers. But there is their twenty-four runs against fifteen put across by rubber boy the Crackers. In three out of the ve played Atlanta out-hit the visitors but their total is one point better.

In the field the 'Noogas were sadly out of it—they had 185 chances and booted 11 of them. Atlanta has only 3 errors chalked up out of 182 chances. Two errorless games were played by the Crackers. The 'Noogas played one game without a bobble.

There is the "dope;" figuratively speaking the series should have gone to the Crackers but the only answer is the old run column. Chattanooga 24, Atlanta 15.

Scientific Placing GOLF Of a Trap On Course

Variety of play is the chief essential of modern golf course architecture. Different conditions of the land require vastly different treatment to produce an eighteen hole links which will demand the use of every shot that should be in the expert golfer's bag. Then again, every course should not be constructed for the sole pleasure and requirements of the expert. To strike a happy medium alike satisfactory to the expert and ordinary business man is what is desired near our large cities.

The Baltusrol links in New Jersey, Myopia in Massachusetts, and the National links on Long Island, are designed to thoroughly test the skill of the expert. If he can make a low score over these difficult links any ordinary course is merely a matter of swatting the ball and holing it out.

On the other hand, such links as Brae Burn and Essex County, near Boston; Montclair and Apawamis, near New York; Exmoor and Onwentsia, near Chicago, and many others are much more popular for the use of average players ambitious of occasionally turning a half way decent score.

The old theory that a golf course should consist of cop bunkers at from 100 to 140 yards ahead of every tee has given way to traps and mounds arranged in such a way that the short but sure driver can pick his way around the course nine or ten strokes behind the man who can make the longer carries.

This is a perfectly fair reward for the longer and surer player, and one against which the more moderate hitter can lodge no valid argument.

The usual course of instruction is to cut down half of the old cop bunker, first on the right side and then on the left side of the next hole, so as to call for accurate control on the part of the shorter player. Then added hazards are placed in the path of the shorter player for his second shot, while a clear way to the hole is left for the longer hitter, who courageously clears the first hazard.

STRAIGHT DRIVE.

Bayless and Moran Stars

Cap's Angels found the Oakland pitchers easy last week and several Seraphs fattened their batting averages. The inability to hit at the right time was responsible for the loss of the 'series to the Commuters. Howard, Abrogast, Maggert, Moore and Ellis batted over the .300 mark.

Dick Bayliss, Hap's star right fielder, led the Tigers with the stick last week. His average for the series was .435, against McCredie's star band of twirlers. Ham Patterson broke up and clouted the pill for a mark of .421. The rest of the Tigers did not figure very prominently with the stick during the seven-game clash with the Ducks.—Los Angeles Tribune.

A fan in far away Los Angeles sent a copy of the Los Angeles Tribune to the sporting department with the remark that both Moran and Bayless were released by Atlanta because they were too weak. Both are given a tremendous boost in the Tribune. Moran being referred to as the best outfielder in the league, while Bayless is the king bee hitter.

Sally Clubs Hold Places

The most remarkable feature of the past week's results in the South Atlantic league was the persistency with which the clubs retained their comparative standings. At the beginning of the week, the six clubs were so bunched as to render their positions highly uncertain, and at the close of the week the only shift in comparative positions was that between Albany and Macon at the bottom of the list, Macon moved from sixth to fifth place, leaving Albany to trail the procession.

Savannah continues to lead the league, but by a margin so narrow as to make it possible for Columbus to go to the front immediately. The record of Columbus for the past week has inspired renewed enthusiasm among the supporters of that club, which has won 3, lost 2 and tied Saturday's game with Charleston, 4 to 4, after thirteen innings. Another tie game of the week was that of Charleston and Macon on Wednesday, 7 to 7, which, however, went only six innings. With the chances for leadership so inviting, every club of the league enters the new week in a "scrapping" mood, and all the managers and owners are confident of good games and large attendance.

Petition for Good Racing

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—A party of business men from New York, Buffalo and Poughkeepsie called on Governor Sulzer and handed him a petition in favor of racing.

This petition contained more than 26,000 signatures, obtained by voluntary canvassers in a sort time, and will unquestionably be supplemented by other petitions containing equally as many signatures.

The reasons for the petition have indorsed it as having been "signed in their presence, and the signatures are one and all believed to be genuine and the addresses accurate."

The petition bears the signatures of financiers, retired and active; lawyers, physicians, bankers, business men, journalists, mechanics, farmers, laborers and men in all walks of life, and, as far as possible, names of those who are not bona fide residents and voters of the state of New York have been erased.

The body of the petition says:

"Thoroughbred racing in itself is a healthful, entertaining pastime, and highly important as a means to induce the breeding of valuable horseflesh, and a stimulus to an industry which in every civilized country receives the careful and liberal encouragement of the government.

"We are indorsed in by the leading nations of Europe throughout their respective territories, their greatest race course and most conspicuous racing events have grown colossal their commercial and political centers. There is no capital in Europe which does not count among its regular attractions race courses, where the honors to be won rank with the rewards of the most useful and elevating occupations of its citizens.

Giants Gain a Half Game in the Past week, While Athletics Drop Down One Full Game—Double-Header Season

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—No new viewpoint in the championship outlook in either of the major leagues has been developed by another seven days of baseball. Of the leaders in the National and American circuits, the New York Giants gained a half game and the Philadelphia Athletics lost one full game, leaving the situation practically unchanged after a week of interrupted schedules padded with double-headers.

Playing better ball than any of the other clubs, McGraw's team, winning five games and losing one, not only more than held its own, but succeeded in making up the ground lost to the Phillies during the spurt of Bodh's players in the previous fortnight. The Giants by their return to form brought their total of victories and defeats to 14 and 6 in three weeks past. The Phillels' figures in the same period are 13 won and five lost. The last week they dropped two out of five.

A better balanced week than the one just ended in the American league probably has not been furnished before this season. Cleveland, Chicago and Washington each broke but little better than even, winning three and losing two. Detroit split even, two and two, and the Athletics and the New Yorks won two and lost three. This left the St. Louis club winning but one out of five and the Boston's winning three out of four.

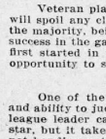
The present leads held by the Giants and the Athletics prompted the national commission to set October 6 as the date on which the 1913 world's series will start if these clubs win the pennants.

Marquard and Frommie each two victories each, Tesreau getting the fifth carried the Giants across their week of success. Mathewson being charged with the only defeat.

The star in twirling in the big league was Washington's Walter Johnson, who ran his string up to the record for the season. Johnson, aside from this achievement, pitched his way to the front in the major leagues. His twelfth straight was also his twenty-eighth triumph of the season against five defeats.

Big prices for "finds" in the smaller leagues continue to prove that the national game is not threatened with bankruptcy. Manager Chance announced the expenditure of $9,000 for Pitcher McHale, of Jersey City; Cooper, of Petersburg, and Pick, of Dayton, and President Ebbetts, of Brooklyn, $30,000 for Pitcher Brown, of Montgomery; Pitcher Hendrix, of Memphis, and others, Detroit paid $3,500 for Pitcher Covelski, of the Chattanooga Southern league team. Other clubs also bought, sold or exchanged, but none, we had it the Griffith, of Washington, was prepared to offer $100,000 for Ty Cobb.

The request for waivers on Sheckard, Bates, Dooin and Sugden and Dode Devore to the Phillies, was followed closely by counter statements by President Herrmann and Manager Tinker, of Cincinnati, as to the roller being used in building up the Reds. Thursday was followed by a single to-day Friday, after which the Phillies suffered a double loss to Chicago. Boston split even on the week, 3 and 3. Cincinnati dropped into seventh position, notwithstanding that they also won but a single game. St. Louis dropped 5 during the week. The transposal of the teams was the only change in either league's stand.



BUNTS AND SINGLES
BY JULIAN MURPHEY

Young ball players is now the cry in baseballdom where ten years ago you could not induce any live wire manager into the belief that youngsters were what it took to build a successful baseball outfit. Since then times have changed, and the managers who bucked for the old-time players have found out and the men who believe in taking crude, though natural, talent and building it up are just in their prime.

Veteran players in their place are all right, but too many veterans will spoil any club, a mixture of vets and youngsters, with the latter is the making of a team. It is a battle of every manage rwho is meeting with success in the game. Often these young players will fail to deliver when first started in the great diamond game, and this gives a manager an opportunity to show his real worth.

SHOULD HAVE PATIENCE.

One of the greatest assets of any successful manager is patience and ability to judge baseball material when in the crude. Any old minor league leader can pick out a young player who has all his life been a star, but it takes a real leader to hold to the youngsters when they are not handing out firstclass ball and yet have the making of a good ball player. You have got to judge the player properly and then have the nerve to hold to him against the bellowing of fandom.

No star ball player was made in a day, or maybe not in a season. They have to grow up properly and have plenty of training before they become accustomed to getting away with the kind of ball that makes a hit with the fans and shows the wisdom of the manager. Some managers too often go against their better judgment in releasing players, and also because fandom is against them. It is the manager who brings games that is popular with the fans, and whenever one has a good player under his care it will in the long run pay him to hold to him, even though the fans clamor for his release.

SHOULD SEARCH BUSHES.

Billy Smith and the local association have most certainly adopted the proper policy in the search for players for next season. Already the mogul is on the hunt for youngsters, collegians and bush leaguers both. He wants to fill in the vacancies on his club by adding four or five young players who show signs of hitting and inside baseball. They may not be used next season, and the following year be stars. In fact, the proper way to develop the youngster is to get your hands on him and then farm him to some good class B or C club and let him be developed.

The Atlanta club right now has quite a bunch of young material on the string, and all will work out for places next year. The young list includes Holland, Keating, Reynolds, Calvo, Thompson, Voss and Conzelman. These are all real young players, while in Bisland, Chapman, Long and Welchonce the club has material which is far from ready to the veteran class, and yet they have been at the game long enough to know baseball and put up a crack article.

And the best part of the work of the Atlanta club is that other youngsters are to be picked up shortly. They will come in for use on some farm next season, and the following year will be ready to step up and take the places of the stars who go higher.

THE SPORTLIGHT
BY GRANTLAND RICE

The Giants have been reported as being in a heavy slump, torn asunder by dissension. As their record for the last three weeks shows fourteen victories against six defeats, for a general average of .700, it is easy to understand how keenly the Reds, Cardinals and Dodgers might enjoy life if they too could only strike such a spasm of rickety play.

THE CRUELTY OF TRADES.

"Baseball," remarked a fanatic recently, "is the most cruel and inhuman of all games. Think of a veteran like Otis Crandall being traded at this stage from a leader to a tail-ender—from New York to St. Louis."

There is a vast amount of truth in this remark. But at the same moment along comes old Doc Emerson's theory of compensation. "How about the cruel and unusual punishment inflicted upon Larry McLean, who was traded from a tail-ender to a leader—from St. Louis to New York? It was tough on Crandall, but no one has yet heard Long Larry threatening to commit suicide or inveighing against the inhuman cruelty of the trading system.

ATHLETICS AND NAPS.

C. Mack's free swinging, mauling aggregation hasn't become dismantled as, yet, but there is an absence of that once deadly punch which came through whenever needed.

At the mid-August turn Mack's club has a smaller American league margin than McGraw enjoys in the National. For the first time there was a faint, dim suspicion that something might happen after all to prevent F. Baker closing out a world series with his accustomed pomp. This suspicion is trengthened by the way Cleveland continues to pike along. If it was early May there would be no uprising in the dope. But this is waning August, with the odor of burning leaves just beyond the threshold. And in place of its usual detonation the Nap machine is bounding along at a faster clip than ever, making a game fight against a great club, whether said fight will achieve the almost impossible or not.

QUITE TECHNICAL.

Which brings up a technical question. Just how much will Giant pitchers gain in case F. Baker and Eddie Collins are forced to give way to N. Lajoie and J. Jackson?

The Athletics carry all the best of the dope. But not enough to cheer over should Mack bump into hard luck with the fortunes of war imparting an extra push to the Naps.

When Cicero exclaimed, "O tempora, O mores," the old boy knew something. Undoubtedly he had in mind the spectacle of Pirates and Cubs battling at the closing turn for third place, 18 games behind the crest.

If this isn't a case of O tempora it at least verges close enough upon the O mores to be considered in line.

VICE VERSA, ETC.

J. Boehling peeled off 11 straight, and now, headed in the other direction, he is still traveling at the same terrific speed.

He has only had four chances to make it straight the other way back, but he has accepted them all with astounding celerity and eclat.

Before the Naps start to claiming any pennant they might as well remember that Connie's team still has 6 or 7 games left with the Yanks. Any time the Mackmen begin to falter they stumble upon the Yanks and watch their percentage grow again.

AMONG THE TWISTS.

Which recalls another peculiar twist to the national pastime. The Yanks, tailenders, have been helpless in the east, but have acted as roaring lions against the west.

The Mackmen have devoured the east alive, but have been buckled up time after time against tribes from the haunts of the setting sun. The answer? There isn't any. There never is to baseball dope.

It is reported that while over in this country an effort will be made to have Harry Vardon, the English golfer, bat against Walter Johnson. If the engagement comes off Vardon might as well save the price of caddy fare in advance. The services of a caddy are not needed to extract the ball from the catcher's glove.

Griff is reported to have offered $100,000 for Ty Cobb. And only two weeks ago we offered Andy Carnegie $8,000,000 for his Steel bonds, but he turned us down. When Owner Navin sells Cobb for $100,000 he might as well spend $10,000 of the amount buying guncotton with which to blow up his plant.

Richie-Welch Bout Indefinitely Postponed

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 18.—Owing to an injury to his right hand which Freddie Welsh received while training, it was announced that his bout scheduled for Labor day with Willie Ritchie for the lightweight championship of the world had been indefinitely postponed. The promoters of the bout, however, announced that they were making an effort to substitute Leach Cross or "Harlem" Tommy Murphy for Welsh.

Oehmig, of Cincinnati, retained his title as tennis champion of the Chattanooga Golf and Country club, defeating Eugene Thomasson, of this city, 7-5, 6-2, 3-6, 5-7, 6-4. Whitesides and Guerry, the champions in doubles, successfully defended their title against Morrison and Martin.

BIG SUMS FOR PLAYERS USUALLY PROVE A STING

Less than a month ago Owner Comiskey, of the Chicago White Sox, created a mild and modest furore in baseball circles by the announcement of the purchase of Outfielder Larry Chappelle from Milwaukee at an outlay of $21,000, more or less, writes Jo Williams in the Memphis Commercia-Appeal.

Now cometh the angel of the immaculate hoselings with a cry that he was bumblebeed on the deal.

It developed that the Luxuriant Larry boat it to the bizarre belt with a maimed hock as one of the requisites. Consequently he has been about as valuable to the Callahans in their pennatward flight as a twelve-inch buzz fan in a Texas tornado.

But despite the Chappelle bunko, for such it has been to date, the money men of the majors continue to extricate themselves from princely sums for promising minor league talent, which may or may not come up to expectations.

Frank Farrell, millionaire owner of the New York Yankees, is the latest to qualify for membership to this unique and opulent order. Last week the former turfman enriched the Baltimore strong box to the extent of $17,000, receiving for said enriching Infielder Fred Maisel, the Oriole's star.

Whether this Maisel will develop into a blossom of rare fragrance or an odiferous bloomers is something that mortal man knoweth not.

But while on the subject of fancy priced artisans we fain would humbly inquire: "Why do the pastiming birds in the gilded cage always fall down when they fly from the bush to the large brush?"

Should it prove a fact that Chappelle —price tag $21,000—and Maisel—sale tag $17,000—prove bloomers next season, it will not be recorded as an unusual occurrence, but rather as the usual result of sensational bargaining.

Just why this is, no man knows, but the fact remains that few of the gilded gladiators prove shining lights in the majors.

Train your lamps upon this layout: Russell Blackbourne cost $10,000; Rube Marquard cost $11,000, Lefty Russell cost $12,000, Fred Maisel cost $17,000, Larry Chappelle cost $21,000, Marty O'Toole cost $22,500.

Truly an appalling figure when one thinks of a Cobb that cost a trifle over $500, a Speaker that brought little more, a Collins that cost absolutely nothing, and a Barry that meant no expenditure of money.

While Marty O'Toole, the highest priced player in captivity, has proven a fairly dependable man ith Pittsburg, it's a diamond tiaria to a petrified pickle that Barney Dreyfus could not get $25,000 for the pitcher in the busy marts of baseball today. Of the entire lot of fancy-priced pastimers, Marquard alone has proven a real star, and e all remember how long it took the ungainly Rube to come into his own.

There is something strange about these fellows—how they slump. It seems as if some evil genius pursued these boys, admittedly players of class and courage, after they strike the main trail.

Take a peek at their histories.

Marquard's work attracted the attention of the late John T. Brush and he sought the portsider—paid $11,000 for him. Rube struck the main burg. Straightaway reams of copy went through the press about the southsider, and then—bing!

Rube failed dismally for two years. Had the stuff—no question about that—but lacked control. Two springs ago Rube came south with the Giants. In the McGraw entourage was one of the brainiest catchers who ever wore a big mit, Wilbert Robertson.

The veteran took personal charge of his Rubelets, put him through a course of sprouts, nursed his delivery along with tender care. And there were more reams of copy sent through the press—wonder.

Rube led the National league last season and is doing nobly this year. He is here to stay. He has arrived.

Of the Southern league stars, Joe Jackson's record speaks for itself, while Southpaw Cullop can be regarded as a poor investment by the Naps.

Allen Champion Hard Luck Hurler

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 18.—With all your Bob Russells and Joe Boehlings and Clark Griffiths predictions that lefthanders are the twirling "comers," we have over here in this little burg a young southpaw who on paper measures up with Russell and Boehling, and, in fact, any other partsider in the busines. Yet according to George Moreland, this said youngster has won three and lost thirteen games.

They say that figures never lie, but it takes other figures to prove that the lost and won columns do not convey the whole truth in this case. Even if this young gentleman, Frank Allen, has the unenviable percentage of .185 in the league tablets, he has yielded only an average of 2.9 runs per game, and has allowed 39 runs and 86 hits in 117 2-3 innings.

Look up other twirlers' records, barring Walter Johnson, and you will find that very few have an average at low as 2.9 runs per game to their credit.

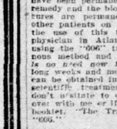
Blood Poison or "606"



I have been giving the "606" and 914 for the treatment of Specific Blood Poison for the past two years and have given something near eight hundred treatments. I have proved, in connection with other leading Specialists, that "606" is THE remedy for Specific Blood Poison. Numbers and numbers of patients have been permanently cured by this wonderful remedy and the blood tests has shown that these cures are permanent and I have numbers of other patients on the road to recovery through the use of this treatment. I was the first physician in Atlanta to begin advertising and using the "606" treatment. I use the intravenous method and consider it the best. There is no need ever for a patient to go through long weeks and months of waiting when results can be obtained immediately by the use of this scientific treatment. If you need treatment don't hesitate to come in and talk the matter over with me or if you can't call, write for my booklet, "The True Story of Salvarsan," or "606."

REPORTS OF RAINS IN THE WEST CAUSED BIG BREAK

Market in New York Closed 10 to 24 Points Lower Than Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Reports that showers had fallen over drouthy sections of the southwest were accompanied by a sharp break in Liverpool today, and cotton opened with a decline of 14 to 17 points. There were many selling orders at the start, and recent buyers seemed to be liquidating on Texas rain reports, but offerings were well taken on reports that the weather was clear and warm in Texas and Oklahoma this morning.

Business became less active after early offerings had been absorbed, and prices rallied 7 or 8 points from the lowest on covering, with the market about steady at midday, and from 9 to 10 points net lower pending definite weather reports. Estimated receipts today 8,000 bales.

Failure of the official details to show as much rain in Texas as suggested by early advices seemed enough reason for a small pullback to nearly Saturday's closing during the noon hour. Business, however, continued quiet and the market later ruled some 5 to 6 points net lower.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 18.—The cotton future market opened steady at a decline of 10 to 17 points on poor cables and reports of rains over Sunday in Texas and Oklahoma, which the bears considered a good deal more widespread breaking the long drouth in those two states. These reports were from private sources and were not confirmed by the weather map, which showed only a heavy belt on the first call and had decided influence on Liverpool, according to cable messages from that market. After the call prices were off 10 to 17 points down. Shorts took profits and caused steadying of a reaction. At the outset of the first half hour of business prices were 10 to 11 points under Saturday's close.

The official weather report noted rain at only eleven stations out of fifty, counting both yesterday and Sunday, in the state of Texas and this together with the forecast of generally fair weather for the western half of the cotton region except for showers along the gulf coast caused nervousness and covering among shorts and brought in some little long buying from the middle of the morning on the market had a very good response and prices displayed a decided reactionary tendency. At noon the trading month were 6 to 8 points under Saturday's last figures.

TIMES-DEMOCRAT REPORT

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 18.—The Times-Democrat herewith presents the reports of its correspondents as to the condition of the cotton on August 12. The consensus of opinions is to the following effect:

First. With the exception of Texas and Oklahoma, little if any improvement has been made. The two states just named have suffered from drouth and excessive heat and the deterioration has been considerable.

Second. The crop has been exceedingly well cultivated and the result begins to be manifest.

Third. The boll weevil has been active in many districts, but the farmers have waged a vigorous campaign against the pest, and the damage does not appear to have been important, except in certain sections of Texas and Texas.

Fourth. The supply of labor is generally said to be sufficient and no trouble is expected on this score.

Fifth. Most correspondents report that farmers are inclined to sell; at current prices, at least enough of their crops to put them out of debt.

NEW YORK STOCK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The market shows considerable strength and has the appearance of going higher. Several holders of stocks were forced to liquidate on the break of the week and their holdings have gone into strong hands impressed with the technical position of the market. We are of the opinion stock will sell higher especially B. S. Copper and R. R. Rotter.

NEW YORK COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The market sold off this morning on a week's favorable weather reports rains over Texas yesterday but was later bought in the belief that temperatures in Oklahoma and Texas and wires received reporting considerable damage by the continuous drouth and extremely hot weather. The feature of the rather is far more bullish than it has been for one time at all. Speculation has not been a factor in the buyer in this market today, also a good many other market points out. Those inclined to the bear side are of the opinion that should good rains occur over the week that we may expect a considerable decline.—Anderson.

Time Studies in the Kitchen

(Chicago Inter Ocean.)

We will suppose that you are still working at the hash and badly overworked problem. Have you ever noted just how you walked, and in how many directions you stepped, when you were making a row from the range to the table to an omelet? What was the trouble? Was your plan and steps wrong or relative? Did you keep the mixture bowl in a closed closet, or did you have to walk across the room for the egg beater? Did you ever think to write down how long it took you to make an omelet under these conditions? How much time was wasted or took above the actual necessary task if the omelet was making?

We know that nine-tenths of waste motion in the kitchen results from a misAgBIRD of time in the kitchen results because the apparatus is badly arranged. Why not just make a chart of how you do any one thing under present conditions? Then study it and see how you can change those conditions for greater efficiency. Then make a second chart and see how much time you save and how many steps you do not need to take. You will be surprised and interested and encouraged to seek still more efficient arrangements and group-

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

How to Get Your Fowls to Molt

THE best method to get birds molting early, and most of them at a uniform stage, is to give them their liberty and free range, and feed only a limited amount of food that is not fattening, such as wheat bran made into a stiff wet mash, together with boiled oats. They should not be fed enough to satisfy their appetites, making them reduce some in flesh. This should be practiced for several weeks, but do not allow the birds to get too poor or weak. Usually three or four weeks of treatment of this kind will be sufficient, especially where the birds are in fair condition. They should be confined in a yard with limited space after going through this method, then gradually increase their feed until their appetites are satisfied, getting them to consume just as much as possible. You will find that they will begin to take on a new coat just as soon as they begin to take on new flesh.

It is a good idea to feed Aunt Patsy's, Parks and Pollard, Red Comb Cerella, or any other good, dry mash feed continually before them in self-feeding hoppers. Twice each day they should be given a heavy feed of grain with some whole wheat or whole grain corn added to the ordinary scratch feed. A wet mash twice each week will be very beneficial and much enjoyed. This should be composed of boiled oats, alfalfa meal, and meat scraps, to which should be added equal parts of bran, corn meal and shorts.

While they are molting or taking on a new coat of feathers, it is a good idea to add a limited amount of cotton seed meal or flaxseed meal either to a dry mash or to the wet mash, say ten pounds to one hundred pounds is sufficient. This should only be fed during the time they are molting. Is is very rich, and will add color to the plumage, making it rich in oil.

Birds that you wish to molt early and quickly should by all means be kept cool, or in shaded places. The molt will be prolonged for some time if they are not kept cool. Therefore, this is very important. This system is best for a large flock, but one of the quickest ways to get a single bird to molt after it has been reduced in flesh, is to confine it in a cool, dark coop or building and feed heavily just what it will eat up clean, at least three times a day. You can ordinarily make a bird molt and grow a new coat in six weeks after it has become thin and you attempt to put on new flesh.

In addition to the regular grain mash feed, they should be fed an abundance of green food of some kind regularly every day. It helps to keep their digestive organs in good fix, and they get the benefit of the daily food when this is done. Tender rape, alfalfa, Swiss chard, oats or green food of any kind is the proper thing to give. Any abundant tender growth that can be cut every day will answer for this purpose.

When this method is first begun all chickens should be thoroughly dipped to see that they are free from insects. The house should be thoroughly cleaned with disinfectant, and the roosts thoroughly inspected to see that no mites are on the premises. If more attention be paid to this particular thing, thousands of fowls would molt out early and begin laying early in the fall. Of course, there is a difference in fowls. Some varieties are inclined to get very fat, and are much harder to reduce than others. Old birds are more inclined to get fat than young ones. Therefore, in a case of this kind the flock should be separated. You will have to be governed in this by personal handling of the birds and see what difference exists.

Thousands of dollars could be saved to the southern breeders by giving prompt attention to these suggestions, during the months of August and September.

Yours very truly,

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED.

QUESTION.

Sanford, Fla.

Will you please tell me what is best to do for my chickens? They have something like scrofula, have on eyes, carlobes and gills. They will stand and shake their heads with their eyes closed and don't seem to want to be disturbed at all. The, don't seem to care to eat at all, and when I take one up to see what to do for it, why some water or yellow color will discharge from the mouth and nose. I had come to the conclusion that it was cholera and gave them epsom salts and milk, twenty drops to a wine glass of milk, then gave a teaspoonful of the milk, but it seemed to do no good whatever. Finally they die. I have lost a good many in that way and seems that there is no let up to it. Kindly tell me what is best to do. I keep fresh water for them twice a day and keep their sleeping quarters clean and well ventilated. I feed them corn, but once a week give them a soft mash and scratch feed twice a week.

D. D. S.

ANSWER.

If you will read The Weekly Atlanta Journal of this week you will see how to treat sorehead. By using the eye treatment, and the pills to which has been added two ounces of carbolic acid, and giving the Epsom salts over a week and sulphur once a week, you can keep in check this dreaded disease. The article in this week's Weekly Journal will tell you just how to treat them. It was also in Daily Journal Monday, August 4.

If southern breeders would use these remedies every year and if taken in time they would never have any trouble with sorehead.

IT IS absolutely necessary for chickens to have green food during the winter. This can easily be supplied if you will plant only small patch of rye and rape, they both grow very rapidly and will furnish an abundance of green food all the winter. Now is the time to plant.

THIS is the moulting season and that means that the hens should be fed a good tonic. Pratt's Poultry Regulator and Conkey's Laying Tonic insures a quick and complete moult and that means plenty of eggs during the fall and winter when they bring the high prices. 25c, 50c and $1.00 packages.

AVOID giving your chickens scratch feed with too much corn in it at this season. Use Red Comb Scratch, the percentage of corn is very small but it has just the kinds of grain that they need now. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

DON'T overfeed, giving charcoal, it helps to keep down indigestion and it is essential that the chickens have it.

CLOSE-IN MANUFACTURING SITES

One of the biggest assets to any business is the right location.

Small manufacturing concerns, especially those just starting a business, find it extremely hard to get a location convenient to both the wholesale and retail districts.

The high prices of close-in properties, especially corners, handicaps a good concern to a large extent. You can invest a good part of your capital in a small piece of well located property, in a few years you have outgrown your location, you look around and the town has grown in every direction and the prices are naturally much higher than when you started.

This is the situation that confronts many a concern today.

On the corner of Washington and Fair streets we offer one of the largest close-in vacant corners in town. This land fronts 192 feet on Washington street, having a depth of 226 feet on one line and 136 feet on the other.

This corner is only a few blocks from the retail section, and only three blocks from the Georgia railroad. The Washington street viaduct affords the easiest access to the whole northern part of the city. This corner affords all the favorable opportunities that could be wished by any concern either large or small. Price $30,000.00. Very reasonable terms.

Linwood Avenue Residence Changes Hands — Seasonable Demand for Homes Has Also Set in, With Contractors Beginning Plans for New Houses—Work on Big Buildings Started Last Year Almost Completed Now—List of Lot Sales

The Burdett Realty company has sold for Mrs. M. A. Whitten to Mrs. Marie I. Benson No. 166 Linwood avenue, a residence property, for $6,200.

This is an eight-room house on a lot beginning 160 feet south of Ponce de Leon avenue.

DEMAND FOR HOMES.

Agents are kept busy these days satisfying the demand for homes, which is always keen during the renting season.

A good many builders who specialize on bungalows and medium-priced larger houses are beginning to operate again, being influenced by the improved supply of money and easier money rates.

Vacant lots inside the city are becoming a scarcity, and this accounts for the large amount of suburban subdivision development. Much as the city limits were extended at the time of the last census, the new territory is rapidly being filled with houses. This condition is particularly true where the city has made improvements, such as sewer and water.

There is considerable demand also for investment property—the more rent the better, and more negro porperty has been sold the past few months than for a long time previous.

BIG BUILDING WORK.

Most of the big buildings which were started last year, making the year a record breaker on building value, are now practically completed.

mtgxJ elaoincmf schmfwCMFWctuoin

Only a few more touches remain to be put on the Ponce de Leon apartments. Tenants will begin to move in the Hurt building on September 1, and the Hotel Winecoff is almost completed. As far as the exterior is concerned, the new county court house is almost completed, and the Healey building will be ready for occupancy by January 1 next.

These various buildings will mean a large increase of population and thus a great incentive to retail business in their respective localities.

An office building, for instance, houses a population as large as some prominent towns. Property around it is bound to feel the effect of this sudden access of new population.
